

REVOLUTION IS NOT ENDED

Situation in Chihuahua and Durango Promises Some More Trouble.

INSURRECTOS OF SUPERIOR GRADE

American Correspondent is Frank About Situation in Mexico.

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 28.—According to staff correspondents of the El Paso Herald, who returned here last night, there is every prospect of further trouble in the affected districts of Chihuahua and Durango. They declared that 30 per cent of the natives in that part of Mexico are against the Diaz government and that those not opposed or supporting the revolutionists are passive.

Revolutionists of Good Class.
The correspondents state that the revolutionist army is not made up of peons and bandits, as has been reported, but consists of native railroad employees, farmers, mechanics and others. The insurgents appear to have plenty of arms and ammunition and seem to have plenty of money behind them. Both correspondents agree that the insurgents have not been conquered, but only driven into the mountains. Desultory fighting is expected to continue and there have been several small fights within the last few days.

W. W. King, a resident of Gomez Palacio, declares he saw the bodies of four Mexican soldiers brought in from the mountains near Gomez Palacio last Friday.

Revolutionary Army Active.
Confirmation has been received of a report that revolutionists tore up railroad bridges west of Parral on Thursday and prevented repairs being made. Confirmation was also secured of the report of a battle at Managua on Wednesday.

The American victims of the rising at Parral Monday were: Edw. Lawton, killed, and J. H. Story, of Hartford, Conn., and A. B. Wallender, wounded. Lawton's throat was cut by a bullet and Story was shot in the abdomen and right hand.

GALLEY BOY BLOWS UP

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 28.—Richard Evans, galley boy on the El Paso Herald, declared in a duress room Sunday night that "Madero can lick Diaz," and was looked up. He had not been released by Mexican authorities today. They intimated he would be merely given a nominal fine, but said his case must be referred to federal officials.

A private message from Chihuahua City says all is quiet there today, following the fighting yesterday. The dispatch says the fight was six miles west of Chihuahua and that twenty revolutionists were killed.

SAW NO SIGN OF TROU

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 28.—This morning's train from Chihuahua City and points south arrived at El Paso on time, and experienced no trouble between here and Chihuahua. Passengers on the train were all from the interior and only heard rumors of trouble near Chihuahua yesterday. The city was quiet on the arrival of the train there last night.

WILSON REPORTS ALL QUIET.

Washington, Nov. 28.—The entire republic of Mexico with the exception of the state of Chihuahua is quiet, according to a telegram received today by the state department from Henry Lane Wilson, United States ambassador at Mexico City. Philip C. Hanna, consul general at Monterrey, telegraphed the department that the latest reports received from the consul in Northern Mexico indicate that tranquility prevailed from the Arizona border to the southern boundary of San Luis Potosi and from the Pacific to the Gulf.

NO FLUB DUB FOR HIRAM JOHNSON

Insurgent Governor-Elect of California Bars an Inaugural Ball.

FORBIDS ANY FUSS

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 28.—Hiram W. Johnson, governor-elect, prior to his departure for Washington Saturday, dictated two letters, one to a friend and the other to the mayor of Sacramento, declining to attend a ball in his honor which was planned for his inauguration.

A few days the mayor appointed a committee of thirty citizens to arrange for the customary inaugural ball, the list having been submitted by Mr. Johnson's local friends. In his letter to the mayor, received today, Mr. Johnson says: "I prefer that your plans be not tried out. The design of the administration I am about to enter upon is simple and direct and I wish my inauguration to be without ceremony or ostentation."

Evangelist to Address Personal Workers at First Church Tonight.

Final conference over preliminary details of the great inter-church evangelistic campaign to be inaugurated in Fort Wayne tomorrow by Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, Charles J. Alexander and their splendid corps of religious workers was held this afternoon between officers of the local committees and E. G. Chapman and J. J. Lowe, of the Chapman-Alexander party, who reached the city at noon. Mr. Chapman is a brother of the eminent evangelist and Mr. Lowe is in charge of the work among the young people. They are guests at the Anthony hotel.

Mr. Norton arrived later in the afternoon for his address to the personal workers this evening, and tomorrow the remainder of the party, save Dr. Chapman himself, will reach Fort Wayne. Rev. Dr. Chapman is detained and will reach the city Wednesday, so that the great opening service of the campaign Tuesday evening will be conducted by Mr. Alexander.

Expect Great Results.

"We have been kept in pretty close touch with preparations that have been made in Fort Wayne by the local committee," said Mr. Chapman, who is in charge of the business direction of the movement, "and we are looking forward hopefully to great results in this city. This afternoon we shall visit each of the places at which meetings are to be held and lend whatever aid we can to final arrangements for the opening of the meetings, the first of which is to be held by Mr. Lowe, who will talk to the young people at 3:15 o'clock Tuesday afternoon."

Mr. Lowe was a member of Dr. Chapman's party when the famous evangelist held his meetings in Fort Wayne fourteen or fifteen years ago, and directed the singing at Princess rink, where the central meetings are to be held during the present evangelistic effort. Mr. Lowe today recalled with pleasure his former engagement in this city.

Special Services Planned.

During the campaign a number of special events have been planned. Among these will be a special rescue mission demonstration, in which Harry Monroe, of the Pacific Garden mission at Chicago, and Mel Trotter, of Grand Rapids, will participate. Special morning and afternoon services will supplement the evening efforts. Approximately two thousand Fort Wayne church workers are already actively identified in the work of the evangelistic campaign, these including the committee officers and members, the pastors, the canvassers, the personal workers, the ushers and the singers. Rev. Earl Marion Todd, secretary of the general committee, says a marked interest is being manifested in the big evangelistic movement.

With the meeting to be held this evening at the First Presbyterian church of the personal workers of the five districts into which the city has

ADOPT RESOLUTIONS

Marion, Ind., Nov. 28.—Post N of the T. P. A. of this city has adopted resolutions resenting a suggestion of the state hotel, keepers that traveling salesmen desired a return of barrooms in hotels situated in dry territory. Since traveling salesmen are the principal patrons of hotels, the members of Post N, in their resolutions, stated that the assertion of the Hotel Keepers' association that the business of hotels had been injured by the removal of barrooms was a reflection upon them as a class.

Declare for Sobriety.

The resolutions in part follow: "The traveling salesmen of Indiana are sober, industrious business men who have at heart the general welfare and good of our community they visit, and they do not wish to be put in the light of furnishing a demand for the return of the 'grog shop' within or without the hotels of the state. We do not desire or demand the return of barrooms to hotels from which they have been excluded by law and we prefer to patronize hotels where liquors are not sold."

The resolutions are signed by Alva Kepner and Oscar Shields, as president and secretary, and Andrew Jackson and Ed L. Weesner, as members of a committee on resolutions.

MURDER OF A WITNESS.

Italian Woman of Denver is Found in Ditch Butchered.

Denver, Col., Nov. 28.—Denver's Italian quarter is wild with excitement today, following the discovery of the body of one of their country women, brutally murdered, in a roadside ditch, six miles north of Denver. The body is believed to be that of Mrs. Dorinda Laeta Cellant, who has been missing several days. The police express the opinion that the woman was murdered to hide information desired by the authorities.

Recently Marco Cellant, brother of the woman's husband, was engaged in a shooting affray and then disappeared. The police threatened Mrs. Cellant with arrest if she did not tell what she knew of Marco's whereabouts. She also immediately thereafter she also disappeared.

CLINTON STREET COMING UP.

Board of Works to Take It Up at Afternoon Meeting.

The petition from the Kerr Murray Manufacturing company for the vacation of Clinton street between Murray street and the Washburn railroad tracks was due to come up before the board of public works this afternoon. It is not likely that the grant will be made as the property owners object and are asking to have the thoroughfare paved. The Home Telephone and Telegraph company has announced that it will put cables on Spy Run avenue instead of single wires and will thus be enabled to remove a number of poles. Those that remain will be painted and every effort made to satisfy the property owners who have been making an effort to have the poles removed.

SQUEEZE AMERICAN SAILORS.

Tradesmen of Brest and Cherbourg Make a Counter Charge.

Paris, Nov. 28.—Le Journal today condemns the practice of rapacious tradesmen at Cherbourg and Brest over-charging the blue jackets of the American fleet who, the paper says, also have been loaded down with spurious coins. Le Journal adds the disorder on the part of the visiting sailors has been confined to an expression of righteous indignation over treatment received or to a defense against the Apache element.

STRIKE RIOT IN CHICAGO RENEWED

Garment Workers Who Returned to Work Are Set Upon by Strikers.

LAD DEFENDS SISTER

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Italians who were said to be striking garment workers engaged in two riots at Westworth and Alexander streets today. One woman was made unconscious by a blow on the head from a baseball bat, a man was clubbed senseless by the police, a sergeant was slightly injured and five women and four men were arrested. Miss Ginto, a laundry worker, was the sufferer from the baseball bat. The woman, it is alleged, was seized by another woman, Bertha Pecon, who was subsequently arrested. While the fighting was going on Police Sergeant John McCann was knocked to the ground by a stone. Joseph Benabilla, who, it is said, threw the missile, was so severely clubbed afterward that he had to be taken to a hospital.

Would Not Go on Strike.

Miss Ginto told the police that the trouble started over the fact that she and several other girls persisted in working after having been asked to go out on a sympathetic strike. A short time afterward Walter Miller, 12 years old, fired upon a crowd of strikers that had stormed the Miller home and shot off the index finger of the left hand of Miss Frances Vezley. Miller's sister Viola and several other garment workers had sought refuge in the house from the crowd, which was angered because they had not remained on strike. The mob of nearly 500 fell back from the boy's shots leaving behind Miss Vezley, who had fainted. The police took her home.

MANY VILLAGES TO BE WIPED OUT

Two Thousand Families to Shift to Make Room for Great Reservoir.

BIG TEXAS PROJECT

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 28.—Preparations are being made by the government to remove nearly two thousand people from their homes in order to make room for the great Elephant Butte reservoir near El Paso, N. M.

Six Mexican villages ranging in population from 50 to 700 will be inundated when the water is turned in, among the towns to be obliterated is Phorag, once an important station and distributing point on the old Santa Fe trail, with a population then of 3,000. Some of the towns are among the most ancient in America, their origin running back several centuries. From Phorag the trail entered upon the famous Jornada del Muerto (Journey of death) where scores died with thirst in the old freighting days. The government is now engaged in buying up the farms and village property of the native residents and by the time water is available, the great basin of forty thousand acres will have been deserted. The ranchers will be allowed to till their land until driven out by the water.

A government agent who returned here Sunday, after spending three weeks in that region, stated that he met but one American during the time and that most primitive conditions prevailed everywhere.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Despondent over long continued illness, for which she thought there was no cure, Mrs. Maud F. Fuller, 38 years old, wife of Alpheus Fuller, 918 Edgecomb place, Friday afternoon cut her throat with a razor and then submerged her head in a half-filled bath tub. For the past year Mrs. Fuller had been under the care of a physician because of nervousness and insomnia. She feared she could never be cured, wrote a note asking forgiveness of her husband and then ended her life. The body was found late in the afternoon by Miss Victoria Stone, of Decatur, Ind., who had been staying with Mrs. Fuller while her husband was on a business trip to Canton, Ill., buying coal and other supplies for the Burlington road. The funeral services were held from the home in this city today.

WENDLING CALLED TO PLEAD.

Alleged Murderer of Alma Kellner in Louisville is Arraigned.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 28.—Joseph Wendling was called before Judge Gregory in criminal court today to answer to the charge of murdering eight-year-old Alma Kellner in St. John's Catholic church, Dec. 10, 1909. Wendling, who was janitor at the church where the Kellner child had gone to mass, is charged with having assaulted and murdered the girl and then hidden her body in the church basement. Portions of a child's body were found months later, and after Wendling had mysteriously disappeared.

Wendling was arrested in San Francisco after a chase of eleven thousand miles. Two of the chief witnesses for the prosecution are Detective Burke, of San Francisco, who arrested Wendling, and Mrs. Cora Munroe, of Hume Mo., from whom information was received which led to Wendling's arrest.

SUGAR TRUST IS ATTACKED

Government Begins a Suit to Dissolve the Big Combine.

ALLEGES IT IS A LAWLESS CONCERN

Controls Three Quarters of Sugar Business of the United States.

New York, Nov. 28.—Attacking the American Sugar Refining company, familiarly known as the sugar trust, as a lawless combination, the federal government today filed its long expected suit for the dissolution of the corporation. The petition was filed by Henry A. Wise, district attorney, in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, and the suit, which is brought under the Sherman anti-trust law, is expected to be one of the most important actions of the kind ever undertaken in this country. The government's petition is a lengthy one, occupying 221 printed pages, and is a sweeping arraignment of the defendant companies.

Big Gift to Havemeyer.

One of the allegations is that the late H. O. Havemeyer, of New York, long head of the sugar combine, received $1,000,000 of common stock of the National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey, as a gift, at the time the corporation was formed to take into the combine four independent concerns—the National Sugar Refining company, run by B. R. Howells and Co.; the New York Sugar Refining Company of Long Island City, N. Y., operated by Claus Doshier; the Mollin-haver Sugar Refining Company of Brooklyn and the W. J. McCahan Sugar Refining Company of Philadelphia. These companies up to 1900 were independent, and it is said, the American company was determined to acquire them. Under a plan inaugurated by Mr. Havemeyer, John E. Parsons and James H. Post, the National company was formed and took over the four plants. Mr. Post obtained options on them. When the new stock was delivered, the petition sets forth, Post delivered 100,000 shares of common stock, the entire issue, to Mr. Havemeyer. The petition says that those shares "were issued in the first instance contrary to law, in violation of the corporation's franchise, and for no consideration as both said Post and Havemeyer then well knew."

Making Money Easy.

The government also alleges that when the American company took over four Philadelphia companies—the Franklin Sugar Refining company, the Sprinkles Sugar Refining company, the Delaware Sugar House and the E. C. Knight company—Mr. Havemeyer and his brother Theodore Havemeyer bought 45 per cent of the stock of the Sprinkles company and then sold it at a large profit to the American company, of which both were directors.

In general, the petition charges that the defendants "for some time past have been, and are now engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy to restrain the trade and commerce among and between the several states and territories of the United States, and with foreign nations, in raw sugar, sugar beets, refined sugar, molasses, syrup and other by-products of raw sugar and sugar beets, and to monopolize the same. Such unlawful combination and conspiracy is a series of wrongful acts extending over a period of many years, and participated in by defendants, respectively, in the manner and to the extent hereinafter more fully set forth. In participating in the various acts, agreements and combinations hereinafter described all of the defendants have been actuated by wrongful intent to restrain said interstate and foreign trade and commerce in raw and refined sugar and related articles and to monopolize parts thereof."

What Government Asks.

The government petitions the court to decree: That the defendants have been engaged in unlawful combination and conspiracy to restrain and monopolize trade, and that their officers, directors, stockholders, agents and employees be perpetually enjoined from doing any act to carry out the purposes of such unlawful combination.

That the court adjudge that the National Sugar Refining company, of New Jersey, and the Western Sugar Refining company, in each in itself an unlawful combination in restraint of trade, and that each of them be restrained from engaging in interstate or foreign commerce.

That the court adjudge that the shares of the capital stock of each defendant corporation heretofore acquired by any other corporate defendant were unlawfully acquired, and

PARLIAMENT IS DISSOLVED

Program of Liberals for Test on the Lords is Carried Out.

HAD ASSEMBLED LAST FEBRUARY

King's Speech is Brief and Barely Touches on the Great Issue.

London, Nov. 28.—The second parliament in the reign of the late King Edward VII, which met on February 15 last, was dissolved today in pursuance of the program of the liberal government to go before the country on the question of the prerogatives of the house of lords.

The king's speech was notable for its brevity, the only reference to the constitutional crisis being a colorless expression of regret that the conference between the leaders of the opposition controlling parties had failed of an agreement over the reformation of the upper chamber.

The Longest Paragraph.

The longest and most interesting paragraph which immediately followed an allusion to the death of his majesty's father, dealt with the recent arbitration of the New Foundland fisheries dispute with the United States and reading: "I confidently hope the questions connected with the North Atlantic fisheries between Canada and New Foundland on one hand and with the United States of America on the other, which have been the subject of controversy for nearly a century, have been at last finally settled by the award of the Hague tribunal. It is the cause of special satisfaction that it has been found possible to solve by arbitration problems of such an intricate and difficult nature and the award has been received by both sides in a spirit which must tend to increase good will."

New Parliament Summoned Jan. 31, 1911.

The proclamation of dissolution summons a new parliament to assemble on Jan. 31, 1911.

Today dissolution of parliament brings to a crisis the supreme struggle now in progress to limit the legislative powers of the house of lords and thereby permit the elective branch of parliament, the house of commons, to exert larger powers in effecting legislation, more particularly measures relating to Irish home rule and the financial budgets. The present house of commons has a ministerial majority of 124 and the present standing of the various elements is as follows:

Liberals, 275; labor members, 43; nationalists, 71; independent nationalists, 11; unionists, 272.

Of the foregoing the first four groups are generally counted as supporters of the ministry, giving a ministerial strength of 387 as against the unionist strength of 272, or a net ministerial majority of 124.

Last Dissolution January, 1910.

The last general election followed the dissolution of January, 1910, last. Prior to that the ministerial majority was 234 and as a result of unionist gains in the election the ministerial majority was reduced to the 124 of the house just dissolved.

The former dissolution was also based on the issue of the house of lords. Premier Asquith having introduced a resolution directing that the refusal of the lords to enact the financial budget passed by the commons had constituted a "breach of the constitution and a usurpation of the rights of the commons."

GOVERNORS WILL ASSEMBLE.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 28.—Governors, ex-governors and governors-elect from states in all sections of the union will attend the governors' conference to be held Tuesday. The opening session of the conference will be held at Frankfort, the state capital, and the concluding sessions in Louisville.

NEW KINK IN THE TRUNK MYSTERY

Supposed Victim Has Been Seen Since the Murder Was Committed.

BODY NOT CALLER'S

New York, Nov. 28.—A new turn was given the trunk mystery murder today by statements of witnesses who declared that Albert Callier, the supposed victim, was seen alive in 1905, three years after the date when the crime is believed to have been committed.

The trunk containing the body recently discovered in a dwelling house tenement is alleged to have been left there in 1902 by William Lewis, a waiter, for whom a widespread search is now progressing. Callier, a French artist, who was a close friend of Lewis, disappeared in 1902 and until now no one has reported having seen him since.

The authorities today, however, are in communication with two persons who declare they saw Callier in this city in 1905.

CITY COURT CASES

William Russell, released from the city court on Friday, got hold of some neuralgia medicine containing ether Saturday night and was arrested for drunkenness after he had made several efforts to give his overcoat to a westend grocer. He stated in the most positive terms in the city court today that he had not taken a drink of intoxicating liquor and the fact that he insisted that he handled thirty-one tons of coal Saturday indicated that he had not fully recovered. He was let go.

He had his wages to show that he had bought no liquor and said that he went into a drug store and asked for some neuralgia medicine and was given the mixture that caused his arrest. He was very abusive to the officers, but was let go on his promise to leave the city. When he was questioned about his overcoat he said he couldn't remember having tried to give it away and said that after he began inhaling the medicine he did not remember anything until he was in police station.

The Other Cases.
Robert Hurley, a Huntington Jeweler, met a man on a traction car who had a bottle. He drank out of it and was found lying on Calhoun street in the rain. He was let go.

Max Fromuth, found on the golf links Saturday morning, was let go, as were Gust Heine and Leonard Mayhew.

Peter McIntyre was fined $5 and costs for drunkenness and Harry Garsen and Victor McCarthy each drew $1 and costs for the same offense.

Harry Smith was sent over fifteen days for vagrancy. He said he was hunting work, but his mind is evidently affected and he was jailed in the hope that he will recover.

Clarence Huffman, released from jail on a charge of drunkenness after serving fifteen days, was sent over again for six months with a fine of $5 for an aggravated case of public indecency at Huntington.

KELLER ON WAY HOME.

Delivered to Immigration Officer to Be Sent Back.

Joseph Henry Karl Keller, arrested with a woman whom he had brought from Germany where both deserted families, was today delivered to an officer of the immigration department to be deported and will be sent back to his old home on the charge of having brought a woman into the United States for immoral purposes. Both were arrested a short time ago on John street and the woman went to her old home on a ticket supplied by her husband.

MRS. MUNSON IS AFTER A DECREE

Said Husband Did Not Attend Court and She Was Ignorant

DID NOT UNDERSTAND

Mrs. Susanne Munson thought that because her husband did not attend court on the day fixed for her to enter an appearance in a divorce suit filed by him that it was not necessary for her to be present and she failed to be on hand and a judgment was entered by default a few days ago. She wants it set aside.

She said she wanted to make a defense and that on the day named she walked three and a half miles to Cedarville and watched Charles Munson, the husband in the case, all day and as he did not go to court she was under the impression that she did not have to. They have four children, the oldest ten years old and she wanted to make a fight for their custody.

In a petition filed today by P. B. Colerick to set aside the verdict she alleges she was never in court in the case, knew nothing of the granting of the decree and is really the aggrieved party to the action. She says she will be able to show that he knocked her down, shoved her through a screen door, cursed and abused her and drove her and their children from home.

His wife charges that he spends his time and money with a "yellow-haired" woman named Alma Kaede.

That each such holder be enjoined from continuing to hold such shares, and that the issuing corporations be enjoined from permitting the exercise of rights incident to the holding of such shares, and that they be enjoined from paying dividends to the holders.

That the shares of capital stock in the National Sugar Refining company, Utah-Idaho Sugar company, Great Western Sugar company and Continental Sugar company formerly held by the late H. C. Havens were unlawfully acquired by him and are now being unlawfully used by the executors and trustees under his will, who are made defendants in the suit. The government asks that the executors and trustees be enjoined from further using the powers incident to the shares so held by them as to bring about co-operation between the issuing companies and the other defendant corporations.

That the defendants be enjoined from continuing to carry out the purposes of the unlawful combination and conspiracy, and be required to withdraw from all connection therewith.

That the court grant such general relief as may be proper, by way of injunction, receivership or otherwise.

LITTLE CENSURE FOR FORT WAYNE

Pure Food Inspector Says Conditions Here Are Fairly Good.

IS MAKING EXHIBITS

F. W. Tucker, of Peru, deputy food and drug inspector for the state of Indiana, said today that the pure food conditions in Fort Wayne were in fairly good situation, and he had little criticism to offer.

"Local inspection has resulted in marked improvement in the conditions under which milk and other foodstuffs are offered for sale in Fort Wayne, and while naturally the prevailing conditions are not perfect, they are much better than in some other parts of the state. Recently we have been giving much of our attention to those points which have no local inspection," continued Mr. Tucker.

Just now Inspector Tucker, with the assistance of Dr. W. F. King, of Columbus City, is making a tour of the state with the pure food and tuberculosis exhibit, the purpose of which is to aid the campaign for the eradication of tuberculosis and to educate the public regarding the pure food laws. The inspector left at noon for Hammond, where the work is going forward this week.

H. E. Bishop, assistant state chemist, was in the city today in connection with the business of his office.

DEAD ARE TWENTY-FOUR.

Revised List of Fatalities in Newark Factory Disaster.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 28.—A coroner's jury was drawn today to make an official investigation into the Newark fire horror by which twenty-four girls lost their lives. Another body was recovered by the firemen this afternoon, but it was badly burned so that it was not identified. The coroner's jury, the personnel of which the authorities refuse to give out this afternoon, will view the body of Carrie Robrecht, who met her death by jumping from the top floor of the burning building. Firemen are searching for the bodies of those who are thought to be still in the ruins.

The foreman of the grand jury, Thomas D. Smith, declared that the place was not properly protected with fire escapes.

MURDERER NOT MENTIONED.

Wills Left by the Aged Armstrongs Do Not Mention Sears.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 28.—Wills left by the Rev. Amzi L. Armstrong and his wife, the victims of the double murder at Dutch Neck on Thanksgiving eve, were found today in the cranberry barn. There is no mention of Jerry Sears, the self-confessed slayer, in either will. Mrs. Armstrong's will provision is made that Rachel Sears, the mother of the prisoner and housekeeper for the Armstrongs, shall have a home and sufficient clothing for life.

One of the motives for the crime is supposed to have been the expectation of Sears that he would be remembered in his victims' wills.

INSPECTOR RECRUITING STATION.

First Lieutenant John L. Holcombe, who was recently appointed district commander of the Toledo recruiting district, to take the place of Captain William Harrison, who was transferred to Baltimore, Md., for recruiting duty, made his first official visit to Fort Wayne Saturday to inspect the self-recruiting station, which is in charge of Sergeant Soller. Widely Known New Haven Woman Passes Away in Fort Wayne

OTHER DEATHS TODAY

Mrs. Elizabeth Landin, wife of Jacob Landin, of New Haven, died at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Belling, 910 Erie street, this city. Mrs. Landin's age was 66 years, 11 months and 27 days, and death followed an extended illness which terminated in dropsy.

She was born in Germany, December 2, 1843, and came at the age of 8 years with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Welling, to America, the sailing vessel requiring six weeks for the ocean trip. From New York the family traveled by way of the Wabash and Erie canal to Fort Wayne, and the young girl was educated at the Cathedral schools in this city. On June 16, 1863, she was united in marriage to Jacob Landin. To this union were born nine children, three dying in infancy. Surviving relatives include the husband and the following children: Jacob J. Landin, Henry L. Landin, Joseph L. Landin and Mrs. Edward Ries, of New Haven, and Mrs. Nicholas Belling and Mrs. Fred Tilbury, of Fort Wayne. There are twelve grandchildren. The deceased was a devoted member of the Catholic church and a highly esteemed woman, and had long been identified with St. John's society of St. John's church at New Haven.

He was an excellent citizen and is survived by six children—William and Charles Nahrwold, Mrs. George Gephart and Mrs. Earl Morgan, of this city, and Mrs. Robert Clausner and Mrs. Clayton Garst, of Hornell, N. Y. Two sisters, who reside in Germany, and sixteen grandchildren and seven great grandchildren, also survive. The wife and five children preceded Mr. Nahrwold in death.

COOMBS.

Edmund Harvey Coombs, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Coombs, formerly of this city, died Saturday afternoon at the family home in Detroit after an extended illness from diabetes.

For many months the lovable little lad had waged a desperate battle against the insidious disease, during which he devoted the efforts of his exhausted human skill to the effort to bring relief and avert fatal consequences to the brave little sufferer. The lad was of unusual mentality and attractiveness and his death is a prostrating shock to the parents and close friends.

The remains will be brought to Fort Wayne Tuesday for interment at Lindenwood. The exact age of the little one was 5 years, 7 months and 7 days, and his death occurred at 5:20 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The train bearing the remains will arrive over the Wabash railroad at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday. The funeral party will proceed directly to Lindenwood, where a brief funeral service will be held.

FIVE DIE IN MINE BLAST.

Durant, Ok., Nov. 28.—Five men were blown to atoms and nine others were seriously injured by a gas explosion in the mine of the Chas. Van Hise company at Jumbo, near Anler, Okla., today.

Five men were in the cage and fragments of their bodies were blown from the shaft which is 25 feet deep. The other nine men were in the mine. All the miners were white. The cause of the accident is not known. All efforts to reach the entombed miners have been futile as the explosion wrecked the shaft.

TRIED SHAKEDOWN BEFORE CEREMONY

Couple Who Came to Marry Quarrel Over Coin and Separate

EPISODE IN HOTEL

A comedy in two acts, characters a young man about 28 years old and a young woman who had scarcely passed the 20 mark, and who appeared together at the Rossmore hotel Saturday night with the avowed intention of getting married that evening and in less than an hour had separated, despoiling each other heartily, furnished considerable entertainment to the guests at the hotel who were fortunate to enough to witness the entertainment.

It was about 7 o'clock in the evening when the couple appeared at the hotel and engaged a room telling the proprietor that they were going to be married, and in support of this the young man drew forth a marriage license and asked where he could find a justice of the peace. They then prepared for supper and during its course many a gurgling of laughter was suppressed behind a napkin and smiles appeared on several faces at the utter oblivion of the two to anything or anyone except themselves. At the conclusion of the meal they went to their room preparatory to going out and looking up a justice of the peace. Ten minutes later angry words were heard as they went over the transom, and as the quarrel progressed it did not require any great amount of attention to discover the fact the bride-to-be was anticipating her privileges by trying to shake a few silver dollars out of the coming bridegroom's pocket, and that the young man in question was offering strenuous objection to the procedure. The result of the affair was that the couple came downstairs, volunteered the information that the marriage would not take place, opened the door leading to Calhoun street, and with an exchange of scornful glances started off in opposite directions.

SKULL FRACTURED BY A HEAVY BLOW

Physicians Think Garrison Met With Violence Saturday Night

IS YET UNCONSCIOUS

Joel Garrison, found unconscious in Geake's stone yard early yesterday morning, had not recovered this afternoon and in the opinion of Drs. C. B. Stemen and A. H. Macbeth the man had been struck.

Both physicians say there is a fracture of the skull at the base of the brain and this makes his chances of recovery very slim. An operation is contemplated if it is authorized by O. M. Garrison, a brother living at Wabash.

Garrison has a son living here and this son stated that he saw his father Saturday night at Berry and Calhoun streets and that he was drunk. He had $13 with him at the time and there was no money in his pockets when he was searched at St. Joseph's hospital where he was taken by the police.

There were no marks of violence, but the physicians say that the injury could not have been received by falling in the stone yard and that he has evidently been struck a heavy blow.

The police have made an investigation, but have found nothing to indicate that he was in a fight. The department has been waiting for his recovery to question him. He is about 27 years old and boards at 2015 Fairfield avenue.

MICHAEL CUDAHY DEAD.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Michael Cudahy, founder of the packing firm bearing his name, died at 3 o'clock last night at a hospital here of pneumonia. Mr. Cudahy had been ill for five days, the disease becoming serious early Saturday morning. Members of his family were at his bedside when death came. Mr. Cudahy was born in Callan, County Kilkenny, Ireland, Dec. 7, 1841. He came to the United States with his parents in 1847.

Buenos Aires with its many handsome buildings of various kinds is a good field for the sale of elevators. Already 512 of American make are in use there. Italian, French and German competition is to be met with.

HEALTH AND INCOME

Both Kept Up on Scientific Food. Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink. If not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk and about two years ago, through close application to work and a boarding house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time."

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts food, which I did, making it a large part of at least two meals a day."

"Today I am free from brain-dre, dyspepsia, and all the ills of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income."

COARSE WORK BY MEXICAN BANDIT

Grossly Mistreats Girl He Seized and Long Held Captive.

RESCUERS FIND HER.

Tampico, Mexico, Nov. 28.—Miss Grace Rolph, the 17-year-old Nebraska girl, who was kidnapped from a ranch near Tampico several weeks ago by Segando Solivero, a noted bandit, has been rescued and brought here. She suffered indignities at the hands of Solivero and was almost exhausted from the ill-treatment and exposure when found.

Miss Rolph was found Saturday about fifty miles inland from Tampico, deserted. A small band of ruffians and two or three American were in the rescuing party which brought the young woman to Tampico.

Dr. Rolph, of Bendenebe, the father of the girl, was in the searching party and is now with her.

been divided for services the Chapman-Alexander evangelistic campaign, which is to continue for three weeks, will have been launched, a series of gospel meetings which church pastors and members hope and believe will accomplish great good in the conversion of sinners, the awakening of increased spirituality in the churches, and the moral uplift of Fort Wayne.

The meeting of the personal workers this evening is but preliminary in its character. It is for the purpose of discussing plans and methods of work that this band of Christian workers from each of the churches will pursue during the progress of the evangelistic campaign.

Will Be Addressed by Mr. Norton.

The meeting will be addressed by Ralph C. Norton, who is one of the staff evangelists accompanying Dr. Chapman and who has charge of the personal work department. With E. G. Chapman, the business manager of the Chapman-Alexander party, he arrived in the city today from Chicago, where a six weeks' evangelistic campaign closed Sunday night.

Charles M. Alexander, the famous singing evangelist, and the rest of the evangelistic party will arrive here until tomorrow. They include Rev. Daniel S. Toy, Frank S. Dickson, Rev. Wm. P. Nicholson, J. Raymond Hominger, Gordon Johnson, E. W. Naffziger, Robert Harkness, George T. B. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. William Asher, J. J. Lowe, Mrs. Ralph C. Norton, Miss E. Stafford Miller, Mrs. C. M. Alexander and Mrs. J. Wilbur Chapman. The entire evangelistic party will number nineteen active, earnest gospel workers.

In Five Centers.

The series of gospel meetings open tomorrow night. They are held at five different centers: The Princess rink, the First Methodist church, the Third Presbyterian church, the Trinity Methodist church, and the Hughie Bowser Free Methodist church. Mr. Alexander will speak at the Princess rink, Rev. Wm. P. Nicholson at the First M. E. church, and Rev. Daniel S. Toy at the Third Presbyterian church, with other evangelists at the Trinity M. E. and Free Methodist churches.

Co-operating in this great evangelistic movement are the congregations and pastors of the following churches: First Baptist, Plymouth Congregational, Christ's Lutheran, West Jefferson Street Church of Christ, Wayne Street Methodist Episcopal, Westminster Presbyterian, Bethany Presbyterian, First Methodist Episcopal, First Presbyterian, Grace Reformed, Calvary United Brethren, Crescent Avenue Evangelical, Third Presbyterian, Simpson Methodist Episcopal, West Creighton Avenue Church of Christ, Bethel Evangelical, Church of God, Trinity M. E., Mennonite Mission, Free Methodist and St. Paul M. E.

Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock Mr. J. J. Lowe will deliver an address to the young people at the First Presbyterian church. Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock Miss E. Stafford Miller will conduct a women's meeting at the Westminster Presbyterian church. At the Third Presbyterian church at 4:30 o'clock the same day, Mrs. Norton will address a special meeting for girls between the ages of 15 and 29 years.

AN EVANGELISTIC SINGER.

Frank Dickson, One of the Chapman-Alexander Workers.

Frank Dickson, who is one of the evangelists with the Chapman-Alexander party, is a native of Ireland, of Protestant parentage, and has been a citizen of the United States for about twenty-five years, having come to this country in his early youth.

He was engaged in the dry goods business for a number of years, having been in the employ of the well known house of Arnold, Constable & Co., of New York. While living in New York he became very much interested in personal religious work and became a member of the church of St. Andrew and St. Hadley. Later he decided to devote all his time to religious work and leaving New York went to the state of Washington, where he at once took up special work in logging camps, but later on became the assistant pastor in one of the Presbyterian churches in Seattle, from there going to San Francisco in the same capacity, and later becoming the associate of Dr. Chapman in the simultaneous evangelistic work.

Mr. Dickson has now been with Dr. Chapman for the last five or six years and is well known as one of the successful evangelistic singers of the country. He was one of the party that accompanied Dr. Chapman and Mr. Alexander in their wonderful evangelistic campaign through Australia, singing with Rev. Dr. Ford C. Ottman.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

WHILE HUNTING

Companion Shot at Quail and Jesse Bouse, Formerly of Bluffton, Was Killed.

Bluffton, Ind., Nov. 28.—The funeral of Jesse Bouse, aged 17 years, formerly living in Bluffton, who was accidentally killed by his companion, Melvin Irey, a former resident of Bluffton, while out hunting Thursday near Jenks, Oklahoma, took place Sunday afternoon at the home of Jeff Prouty, in Nottingham township, the body having been brought here for burial. The remains were accompanied here by Mrs. Jacob Bouse, the lad's mother, and by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bellamy, an aunt and uncle of the decedent. Mrs. Bellamy being a sister of Mrs. Bouse. Mrs. Bouse and her son have been living at Jenks, near Tulsa, Okla., for several months and Thursday in company with Melvin Irey young Bouse went hunting. They were on an island in the Arkansas river, a short distance from their home, when a covey of quail flew from the ground. Not noticing his companion, Irey fired at the quail, the load of shot going into the head of Bouse. Death was not instantaneous, but the young man only lived a few hours.

SUIT ON CONTRACT.

Brought at Hartford City by Fort Wayne Company.

Hartford City, Ind., Nov. 28.—The Rite Construction company of Fort Wayne has brought suit in court here for balance on contract and extras against the Hartford City Paper company, asking judgment for $11,194.15. The complaint states that the contract price was $12,350; that the work under contract was completed September 21 and that the company had paid $8,979.97. The complaint alleges that they were prevented from completing their work at the agreed time, June 1st, by the paper company, which failed to give possession of the rooms and thereby interfered and delayed the completion of the contract. The complaint further states that the amount asked for in excess of the agreed price is for extra labor and material furnished by the plaintiff construction company. It charges that Ralph M. Snyder, engineer and architect, was an agent of and in the employ of the paper company. The Rite Construction company is one of the companies holding contracts in the reconstruction of the mill.

OLD SOLDIER ROBBED.

Said He Was Held Up by Two Men in "Dark Secret Locality."

Marion, Ind., Nov. 28.—Henry Webb, a member of battalion 5 at the Soldiers' home, reports that while walking near the Dark Secret locality Saturday afternoon he was held up and robbed of $40 and a watch.

Webb said he was accompanied by a comrade for a walk along the river, but he could not recall the comrade's name, neither had he any idea of the appearance of the men he claims assaulted and robbed him.

Webb says two men rushed upon him and one struck him over the head, rendering him unconscious. When he recovered some time later his money and watch were missing and he was alone on the river bank. Webb was able to get out of the Dark Secret locality and friends assisted him to the home, where he was taken for treatment to the hospital. It is claimed Webb had been drinking.

ROCHE WILL CASE

Is Up for Hearing in the Court at Decatur.

Decatur, Ind., Nov. 28.—The Roche will case is up for hearing in the circuit court on change of venue from Huntington county and an effort will be made by certain of the Roche heirs to break the will, but it is not thought that they will be successful, for those who knew John Roche, who donated the money and site for St. Mary's church and school know that his sister, Miss Bridget Roche, only carried out his wishes in making her will as she did. Anyone who knew the late Miss Bridget Roche knew that she was a lady of good, sound judgment and strong mind, although of a naturally retiring disposition.

DREDGING CREEK

WILL COST $12,409

Because of It Lagrange County Must Pay Out That Amount for Bridges.

Lagrange, Ind., Nov. 28.—It will cost Lagrange county $12,409 for bridges alone, as the result of the dredging of the Fly Creek ditch, and much of this money, it is alleged, could have been saved had the county commissioners insisted on the ditch contractor adhering strictly to the specifications. According to a remonstrance filed in the Lagrange circuit court, in which eighty petitioners ask the court to restrain Contractor Clyde A. Walb from continuing his work of dredging the ditch with a twenty-four foot dredge, the specifications call for a much narrower ditch. At some points the specification call for a ditch less than fifteen feet wide, and at many of the stations it is to be less than seventeen feet.

The twenty-four foot dredge will make the ditch several feet wider than originally intended and hence will also increase the cost of the bridges, which must of necessity be longer than originally intended. There is a total of twenty-three bridges to span the ditch, the cheapest of which will be $200 and the most expensive $950. The county council has already appropriated the money for the bridges.

SMALLEST FOR YEARS

Was List of Indictments of Wells County Grand Jury.

Bluffton, Ind., Nov. 28.—The grand jury, which was discharged Saturday, returned only seven indictments, one of the smallest grists that has been returned in recent years by a Wells county grand jury. This, on the face of the returns, would appear to mean that Wells county has been on unusually good behavior in the last few months. There were no big matters for the grand jury to investigate, and efforts to learn of illegal sales of intoxicants or gambling are thought to have been the chief matters that occupied their attention. The indictments are understood to include three charges of selling to minors and one indictment under the "blind tiger" law, but no arrests have been made on them.

WANTS SOMETHING DONE.

The Squire Says Reeves Case Must Be Disposed Of.

Hartford City, Ind., Nov. 28.—Determined to dispose of the Charles A. Reeves case, Justice Lucas Saturday notified Prosecutor Secret and Reeves' attorney, J. A. Hindman, that a trial must be agreed upon immediately. The case was scheduled for trial last Wednesday, but neither attorney nor defendant appeared. The justice says the case has occupied space on his docket long enough without trial.

AN OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

Kendallville, Ind., Nov. 28.—Mrs. S. M. Park, a well known resident of this part of the country, died at her home in Springfield. Death was due to peritonitis and followed a two days' illness. She was born on the Hawpatch, north of Ligonier, March 24, 1847. She is survived by her husband. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Springfield United Brethren church.

WILL PLEAD GUILTY.

Auburn, Ind., Nov. 28.—Mrs. Phylla Wolf, wife of Allen Wolf, of Franklin township, has been ordered to appear before Judge Anderson at Indianapolis on Tuesday morning to answer the charge of sending obscene letters and cards through the mail to Miss Glenzie Eaton. She will undoubtedly plead guilty upon arraignment and settle by paying a fine.

DIED AT AGE OF 86.

Huntington, Ind., Nov. 28.—Krusten Brandt, one of the oldest of Huntington county residents, died Saturday at the home of his son, John Brandt, just over the Dallas township line west of the city. He was almost eighty-six years of age and had been a resident of the county since 1882, coming here to join his son who had preceded him from Germany. Death was due to dropsy and complications resulting from advanced age.

WAS DRUNK AT MILFORD.

Warsaw, Ind., Nov. 28.—Shirley Clayton, of Milford, was brought to Warsaw by Marshal William Stuffer and placed in the county jail. He is charged with public intoxication and with assault and battery. He was given a preliminary hearing before Squire Henry Graham on Friday forenoon and his case was set for next Wednesday.

SIXTEEN ARRESTS MADE.

Marion, Ind., Nov. 28.—Sixteen arrests for illegal sales of liquor were made here Saturday afternoon following the affidavits by Chief of Police Phillips on information said to have been secured by special detectives employed by the police board. The men arrested are druggists and proprietors of soft drink establishments. Bond was given in each instance.

WANT LIMITED TO STOP.

Traveling Men to Make Request of Traction Company.

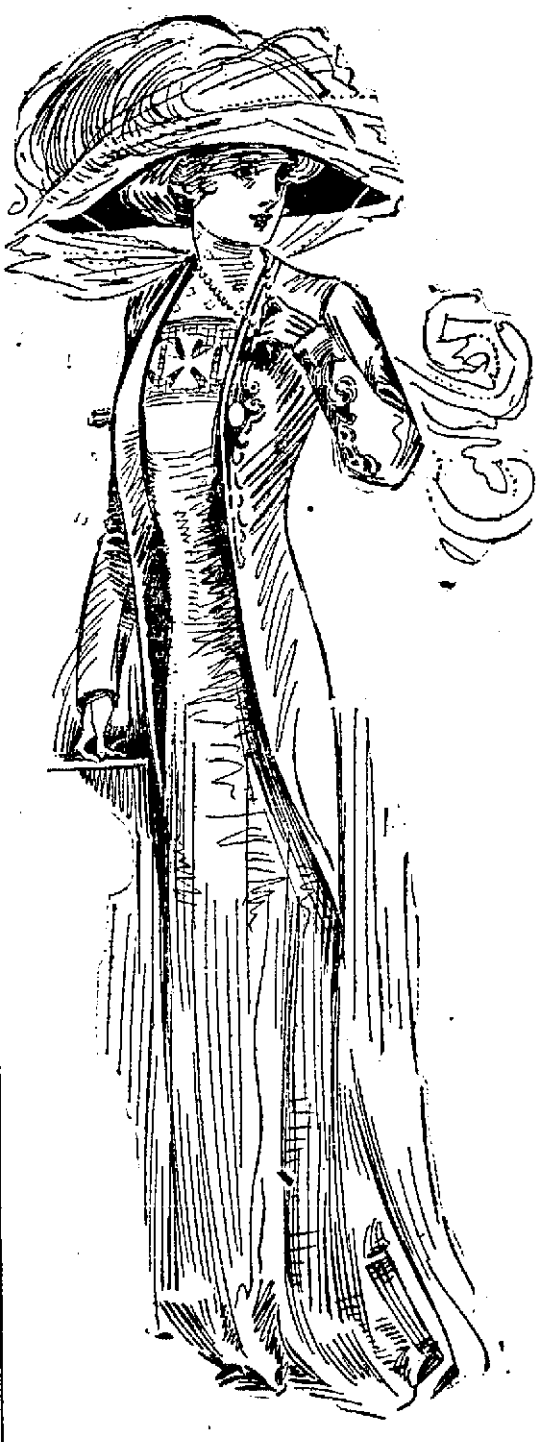

Post A. of the Travelers' Protective association, at a meeting Saturday evening, named a committee to confer with officials of the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Traction company in an effort to arrange for the stopping of the limited cars at a number of points in the city as well as at the interurban station. The traveling men declare it would be a marked convenience that would enable them to reach their homes much sooner than under the present system.

Maurice Niezer, of this city, was endorsed for the state presidency of the T. P. A. next year.

We read in the news columns of one very ably served republican newspaper that "get together behind Taft" is the slogan that accurately defines the policy of the republican leaders. On the same page with equal display is the not less interesting supplementary announcement that the conduct of the "regulars" in the coming short session of congress may "add to Taft's problems." We mean to imply no inconsistency in these features of the news, but merely to call attention to the confused state of the republican party, especially in congress. To "get behind Taft" means to back away—and quite a long way—from Roosevelt. We do not believe the leaders representing insurgent constituencies will create anything like a stampede in their haste to "get together" with the standard crowd that has it chief in interest to line up behind the president. At the same time the president wants the wool schedule revised so that he can point to at least one instance of revision downward before the republican house goes out of business. The standard squad wants none of this nor, indeed, of anything that is a meddling with the tariff. That is the situation that confronts the president, who is now writing his message, and it is the situation that confronts the republican leaders who must prepare in the next three months, so far as it can be done in congress, for a national campaign in which the presidential incumbent is likely to be the nominee. Perhaps it is a situation that would today be considerably eased had the republicans not stood quiet so just against Champ Clark's bluff that if the president would send a special message to congress urging reform of the wool schedule and the republicans would present a bill embodying such recommendations the democratic party would support it. And then, again, maybe not.

Old man Diaz shows a rather truculent dislike to getting into the down and out club with Abdul Hamid, young Manuel, that Persian potentate who came between the late shah and the baby shah, Cip Castro, Rayhead Zelazay, J. Jeffries and that miscellaneous, unsorted and uncatalogued wreckage that constitutes the minus part of scandalism since the late election. In short, the old man is going to hold on just as he has for a quarter of a century and refuse to let go without a reason.

James J. Hill has come forth again to warn us that unless we flee from extravagance the days of wrath will soon be upon us. Waste in the world, he says, is causing our miseries. Seems probable he is right. Does the empire builder go so far in this as to coincide with the economic sharp who the other day declared that the railway business of the country could be run at a saving of a million dollars a day by common sense methods of operation? If so, then we may expect soon to see the Great Northern doing what a spurious corporation can do to ward off the disaster that impends.

The Woman's Club League of this city has arranged a most excellent lecture course for the present season, but there has been such an indifferent response from the public that it looks as though, if the course be continued through to the end, the league will have to meet from its own resources a very serious deficit. This is not in any wise right; it is all wrong. The club league deserves a different sort of recognition for what it has done and what it is trying to do for Fort Wayne. For the past dozen years and more such extraordinary intellectual treats as have been vouchsafed Fort Wayne people have come under auspices of the Woman's Club League. The most eminent platform speakers of the country have been here in procession through a season and the whole course was had for a song. Sometimes the league broke even, sometimes it lost money; but if it ever made anything, it was hardly worth mentioning. A series of entertainments of uncommon merit has been booked for this season. The course ought to be patronized both because it is worth patronage and because it is a very important part of the community's resources of culture and education. It is not the purpose of this notice to din the lecture course at those persons who are not interested, but to urge upon the very great number who ought to be interested that for the sake of the club league's admirable civic spirit in all directions no more than for the thing itself this series of entertainments ought to be given the recognition so well merited.

Governor Clark, of Alaska, appears to be Ballingerized to that extent he cannot see how Alaska is going to get along if something is not done right away with those coal lands up there. Certainly the Alaska coal lands should be developed and certainly Alaska should have the benefit of those and other domestic resources as she may stand in need of them; but that does not mean that the fabulously rich coal deposits should be turned over to the Guggenheims and Morgans for exploitation. And that is mainly what development of Alaska coal lands at this time means. It may be that under the present administration the big interests which are bent on grabbing the vast natural resources will be able to get away with something, but they will not get all they are after and when this administration is succeeded the rapacious will cease. It is a hard fight that is quietly going on, but the stake is enormous and worth the trouble the syndicate may take to possess it.

New York still trying to solve that super-elusive little problem of the cost of living from the two factors of cheaper beef and pork on foot and dearer beef and pork on the fisher's block. Simply no problem at all. They stand for it.

Suppose the administration and the contractors on the outer side of the track elevation job properly resent this butting in of the weather man to spoil a fine wintertime spurt of dirt-throwing.

Mr. Taft seems puzzled to pick out something for congress to do that can stand any chance of getting done.

Some Quaint Old Documents There

Papers in United States Pigeon-holes Make Some Interesting Reading—Early Records.

(Washington Star.)

"Uncle Sam's Pocketbook," as the national treasury is sometimes called, contains some interesting matters besides a goodly store of the necessary and desirable cash. There are many documents, in the form of receipts, accounts and what not, which, prosaic as they may seem when enumerated generically, possess, in a number of instances, a piquant interest, as throwing sidelights upon the development and history of a great nation and those who have figured in its making.

It was not until Miss Mary H. Brady, a clerk in the auditor's office of the treasury, set herself the pleasant task of collecting the more striking historic documents, which had, theretofore, been consigned generally to dust and oblivion, that it was realized what would be done in gathering a veritable museum of documentary curios even in such an unpromising place as an auditor's office.

Miss Brady includes among her quaint documentary treasures the old mileage books showing the sums allotted members of congress in the early days for transportation to and from Washington. This traveling was done on horseback or in stage coaches, and they were paid so much a mile by the government. One of the books covers such items for the thirteenth session of congress, and one of its entries, for $963 mileage, is receipted in a faint, somewhat unsteady hand, "D. Webster." A payment was made to Henry Clay of $560 for 111 days' attendance. Congressmen were then paid by the day, and their pay deducted for every day they were absent. Clay's signature was found to have been cut from the book and it was unrecited not long ago from the dusty cupboard where it had lain for many years.

The quality of the paper used for these old records is of a very superior description, and, saving for the edges, which are somewhat cracked and discolored, it is still in excellent condition. Upon holding it to the light the British royal water mark is disclosed, showing a crown, with the entwined letters, "G. R." below, the paper being of English make during the reign of George III. Some of these water marks show the royal coat of arms, with the crown above it. "Thus," as the custodian of these interesting documents remarks, "the early records of the republic were actually written on the royal crown of Britain."

Evidence of Payment.

As a usual thing, a canceled check is a mere slip of paper, worthless and uninteresting, but when its original value reaches up into the millions and it covers the purchase of a country or a state, or is a record of some other huge and historic national or international transaction, it is worth a second glance, even in the sacred interests of curiosity.

There are several such checks, or, properly speaking, warrants, framed and glazed in a compartment of Miss Brady's desk, and they are not only curious, but are being held by the government as evidence of payment in the cases of these mammoth business transactions. They are warrants for the payment of money appropriated by congress, and they date back as far as 1824, when $200,000 was paid to Lafayette by the United States "in consideration of his services in the war of the revolution." This warrant is signed by William H. Crawford, secretary of the treasury, and is receipted on the back by Lafayette himself, in a small, neat hand.

One of these warrants of historic interest and importance is that which gave the emperor of Russia $7,200,000 for Alaska, under the treaty of 1867. This document is worked in an imposing style. "Pay to the undersigned, by extraordinary order and minister plenipotentiary of his majesty the emperor of all the Russias."

This draft was indorsed by Edward de Stoeck, the Russian minister, and was deposited in a bank across the street from the treasury building. The warrant stipulates that payment shall be made in specie, which requirement was complied with by this country.

Most Impressive Warrant.

A far larger and more important real estate deal on the part of Uncle Sam is represented by the warrant covering the Louisiana purchase, the amount being $15,000,000. This transaction was made under the treaty of 1803.

It seems to be the impression of lots of people," observes Miss Brady, as she sorts out another document from her box, "that we simply marched in and took possession of the Philippine Islands, and that was all there was about it. But these four warrants, each for $5,000,000, tell quite another story, for they represent the $20,000,000 which were handed over to Spain for the Philippines."

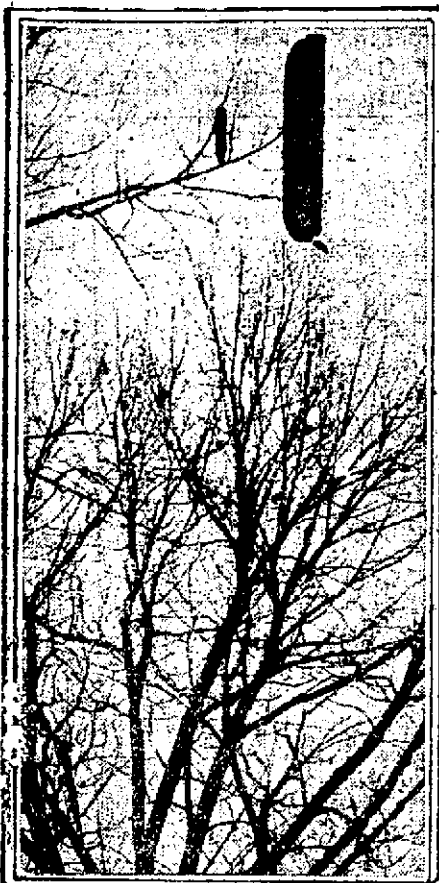

These warrants were indorsed by Julius Cambon, the French minister, representing the government of Spain, this for the reason that a treaty cannot be entered into by any country directly with a belligerent power.

But in regard to the magnitude of the sum of money involved the most impressive warrant ever issued by this government is that paid for the Panama canal. It is a simple draft for $40,000,000 made out to "J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., special disbursing agent," through whom it was paid to the French company. On the back of this document are the signatures of members of the famous firm. A little earlier was issued the warrant for $10,000,000 covering the purchase of the canal zone, the area of ten miles on either side of the big ditch.

Although canceled and apparently valueless from an intrinsic point of view, these warrants are, in effect, receipts, and, as their careful custodian observes, in case of their loss, the government would possess no evidence of having disbursed these enormous sums.

SCENES ATTENDING DEATH OF AVIATOR JOHNSTONE IN DENVER.

MR. JOHNSTONE ASCENDING JUST BEFORE HIS FATAL FALL

MR. RALPH JOHNSTONE

WRECKAGE OF MR. JOHNSTONE'S MACHINE

The accompanying photographs show graphically the extent of the rise of the Seine, which during several weeks threatened to cause a repetition of the destructive floods of last spring, when a large portion of Paris was under water and enormous material damage was caused. Though this time the waters did not reach the unprecedented height of January last, and the most recent cable dispatches state that the river is falling slightly, the danger of a great catastrophe was none the less evident. Hundreds of houses at Choisy-le-Roi and in the eastern sections of Paris were flooded and the inhabitants were forced to flee from their homes.

bearing with them their personal property on wagons supplied by the war department. The authorities early took measures to fight the flood menace, and parapets were erected along the Seine to resist the rush of water. incessant rains, which swelled the tributaries of the Seine to an unwonted extent, were the prime cause of the flood.

ECONOMIES OF FRENCH FOLKS

Instinct of People Seems to Be to Make Much Out of Little—Thousands of Tiny Shops Where Goods Are Sold in Tiny Proportions.

(Charles D. Merrill in the Los Angeles Herald.)

The savings banks of France had at the end of the last year over three-quarters of a billion dollars on deposit, the savings of the middle, but mainly of the poorer class.

The prudence of the Parisians in money matters is most admirable. To make much out of little, to multiply leaves and dishes without a miracle, to economize means beyond all other people, is the good genius of the French. It seems to be both an instinct and an acquisition through many generations.

Come along this first street where we happen to be walking and enter this shop for the sale of bakery goods. Measure the room, for it is typical; it is 10x10 feet. In one corner is a circular stairway to the living rooms above. It represents a circle twenty-seven inches in diameter and is covered with pretty figured grillwork in steel and brass, and is an ornament to the room. On the sides of the stairway grill are tasteful brackets and room thereon for plates of "patissier" (delicate cakes, tarts, etc.) and every inch of the space around the walls is in use. The walls are almost continuous with mirrors and against them are glass shelves and silvered stands of metal that carry them, and these are piled to the top with bread in all its brown and tempting varieties, and the show windows are replete with a variety of elegant bits of bakery goods. Paris, still there is room inside for a counter and two or three tables and chairs, where you sit and munch the bits you buy at two sous each, and room yet for the proprietor and a clerk and all customers who come. When you enter the place it is neat as wax, as you can witness by 100 days' inspection.

Like Bees in a Hive.

Here next is a grocery. It is on a corner and consists of one room, 25x50 feet. It has everything for household use, a supply—all kinds of fruit, vegetables, various fish, jams, jellies, game, dried fruits, cereals, pickles, confections and pastry. There are thirty-nine clerks darting about like swallows, serving as many customers, and you may sometimes wait fifteen minutes, so great is the trade of the store. You look at the size of the store and the multitude of tables, counters and shelves loaded with goods, and you remember the colonies of bees on the old farm, where as a boy you saw a thousand go in and out at work in one small hive. The miracle of natural adaptability only can explain the hive and the store—the economy of space.

Here is a vint and a coal store—a mere niche open to the street five and a half feet wide, perhaps twenty-two deep. It is crammed and crowded with sacks of coal and bundles of wood and rosin dipped kindlings. A shutter closes it at night. You edge in sideways to inspect the fuel; there are a thousand such shops all over Paris.

As of space, so of food, and at the present high prices in Paris there is no explanation of the fact that the poorer people live at all except by the fact of their wonderful economy of all food and fuel. The supply shops and markets show that everything is sold there in the smallest portions—eggs, one to a customer; butter, down to a three-cent package; cheese, to a penny's worth; all vegetables and fruits, down to a pound weight or less; meat in bits of one-fifth of a pound, and fowl, by the leg, wing or skirt.

In the Markets.

Go into the great markets early in the morning and see the produce come in for the day. Examine the packages and figure their cost—that is, the wrappings and crates and boxes. It is practically nothing; the baskets, boxes and coverings are nearly all made from the material produced on the farm or in the garden itself and cost only the work of making them. Willow and twig baskets, carrying things like eggs and butter, and straw plaited and large leaves (like cabbage or fig) hold vegetables and berries, and home-made wool splint boxes bring fruit and potatoes. Often the gardener's packing material has not cost him a penny, and the buyer always brings a basket or net bag and carries away the purchases, without wrapping in paper, and so the cost is greatly cheapened. So thorough is this economical training of children, that they are even, even at ten years of age, to compile their parents and teachers in it, and the thousands of bank books of children and young servants show that they begin early in voluntary saving and learn to enjoy that virtue more than the pleasure of spending their hard earned sous.

A Cheap Hotel.

London has a marvelously cheap hotel for the submerged tenth—a great hall where one may sleep on a straw mattress, a board frame or the floor and have a breakfast of bread and soup, and all for three cents. And this price pays the expenses of the place. But Paris still stands first in hotels, in having a guest house that provides a night's lodging for one penny and pays a profit. It is a great room on the ground floor, used in the daytime as a factory, through the length of which at 9 p. m. are stretched several strong cables of hemp and are made taut by a winch and peg in the wall. On either side of each cable is a row of chairs, and as the weary lodgers come in they take the chairs, and, sitting in them, lean forward, resting their arms on the rope and their heads on their arms, sleeping thus until at 6 a. m. an attendant knocks out the peg in the wall. Down goes the rope with all who may be leaning upon it, and the room is ready for the work of the day. This may be a classic and familiar story to Parisians, but is not universally known to the world. As a profitable lodging house, where one who sleeps in comfort in his clothes may rest with more of comfort in half the space, the venture is certainly cleaner, cheaper and more profitable than the London plan.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

What the Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

The county commissioners meet Monday as gravel road directors.

James Rodgers, superintendent of bridges of the Nickel Plate, entertained a party at a game dinner last evening. To say that they did the lay-out freely expresses it. There was nothing left to tell the tale.

A. A. Chapin is spoken of favorably by the republicans as their standard-bearer in the congressional race next year.

The sad and unexpected tidings of Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks' death came like a lightning flash here and could not be realized at first. The visits of the grand statesman to Fort Wayne were recalled. His magnificent reception here in 1876, and again last year, were commented upon. Mr. Hendricks was the guest of Hon. Mont. Hamilton upon both occasions. He last came here to attend the Episcopal church convention and attended a reception at the residence of Hon. F. P. Randall. Mayor Mohler has called a public meeting at the courtroom this evening to give expression of Fort Wayne's sorrow, and Judge Morris has been asked to preside.

The fair in St. Mary's school hall closed last night with a spirited contest for a silk flag between the Catholic Knights of America and the German Benevolent society. The Knights won the banner by a thousand votes.

The Masonic Temple association met Saturday night and agreed to accept $5,000 in liquidation of the damage occasioned by Hugh Hueston & Co., who failed to complete the temple according to contract. C. H. Aldrich was empowered to collect the sum.

The military ball Wednesday night was quite a social event and the ladies were charmingly attired. The promoters hardly realized as much money as they expected. The attendance did not exceed 150 people, for whom Mr. Eastwood spread a moderate luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fox celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding last evening.

AT THE MAJESTIC

BIG MUSICAL COMEDY

"In Panama" Wednesday Matinee and Night.

The attraction at the Majestic Wednesday matinee and night will be the big Broadway musical success "In Panama" with those two funny German comedians, the Klein brothers. No expense has been spared in equipping and staging the piece. The scenic environment, sartorial display, electrical embellishments, are elaborated in all the word implies; nothing that could add to the success or beauty of the production was slighted, let alone overlooked. The musical numbers are each stories in themselves told with elaboration and detail. The production was staged under the personal direction of that master of stage-craft, Ben Seal. The more comment that Max Hoffman composed the music is sufficient guarantee that the play is replete with catchy, whistable melodies.

SAYS HIS FAREWELL TO ROLE.

Harry Bulger Ends Good-Bye to Tramp Characters Forever.

Harry Bulger, whom Mort H. Singer will present at the Majestic Thursday evening in "The Flirting Princess," is getting farther and farther away from the "tramp" characters. Bulger originated more funny tramps than any man on the stage.

The Bulger tramp became an established standard and when the comedian tried to play something else, managers insisted that he was too good as a tramp, and a tramp he had to be. Even when Savage put him in to "Woodland" he was down on the program as Blue Jay, a tramp politician.

In "The Flirting Princess" Mr. Singer presents him as the honest driver of a taxicab whose troubles are as numerous as they are comical. He has had the leading part especially written for Bulger, who says his role is the funniest and most satisfying of his career.

STAR IS COMING BACK.

Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady" Friday Evening.

Rose Stahl comes to this city for an engagement of one night and will make her farewell appearance in James Forbes' comedy, "The Chorus Lady" at the Majestic Friday. Since her last engagement in this city Miss Stahl has scored many triumphs as Patricia O'Brien, queen of the chorus, and during the past summer she presented the play for one hundred nights in London, and was received with the utmost enthusiasm, making the greatest hit ever achieved by an American star in England. It is scarcely necessary to re-tell the story of "The Chorus Lady" to

OLD TIME REVIVALS

Religious revivals in Fort Wayne are as old as the city itself. In fact, they are much older, for long before there was a city, town or even a white settlement here they were carried on by zealous men of God, who braved the perils and hardships of those early times to carry the gospel to the natives of this, then, forest-covered territory: the Indians, who, in the march of civilization and Christianity, were afterwards driven from our midst, forced to give up their lands that Fort Wayne might be made the city of churches and commercial enterprise it has grown to be.

As far back as 1670, two hundred and forty years ago, the banner of the cross was raised here and a religious revival was in progress. It was instituted and carried on by a Catholic priest, Father Allouez, a devout Jesuit missionary, who labored among the Miami Indians. Other French priests followed him. They came to teach the Christian faith in broken Indian tongue and were instruments in the hands of God for accomplishment of great good.

First Revival Held.

These early missionaries were always cordially received by the Miami tribes here. Their garb was a passport to welcome and their cross an emblem of safety. The Indian would listen patiently to their words and finally through their efforts missionary stations were early established in all of the principal Indian villages. The attempt to convert the Indians was carried on in earnest.

The periodical visits of these missionaries were events of prominence and interest, and one of the first at which religious services were held within what are now the confines of Fort Wayne was at a spot somewhere near to the present site of the St. Joseph hospital. It may be said that it was Fort Wayne's first religious revival. At these meetings held by the missionary priests, and it was probably so at this first service held here by Father Allouez, the Indians gathered and, after prayers, were taught in their native tongue concerning the religion of Jesus Christ. Then followed singing, after which all were dismissed except those who desired to take a part in the mass, which was celebrated by the missionary. After the close of the service the missionary would go about among the tribe visiting the sick and giving help and religious instruction.

Thus for many years, before and after the white trader came with his fire water and his heart filled with greed, the Miami Indians dwelling around Fort Wayne were given their introduction to Christianity.

Church History Began.

After the white settlers came to this locality it was a long time before there was an established church of any denomination, Catholic or Protestant, here. Missionaries and ministers occasionally visited the settlement, but it was not until the beginning of the nineteenth century, and it had been well advanced, that the record of churches in the history of Fort Wayne began to be written.

But, it must be remembered, that through the eighteenth century this was but a trading post and military garrison. The year 1800 dawned before pioneer settlers began making this their home. Their coming was slow. It was not until after the sale of lands here by act of congress approved May 8, 1822, that the village began to grow. In 1828 Fort Wayne only had a population of 500.

Presbyterianism has the honor of having the first resident minister here in the person of Rev. Matthew G. Wallace, who in 1812 was the chaplain at the military garrison. The first preacher to preach here by ecclesiastical appointment was also a Presbyterian, Rev. John Ross, who as a missionary visited this settlement from 1822 to 1828 periodically and largely through whose efforts a congregation was organized in 1831 with Rev. James Chute as pastor.

Were Zealous Revivalists.

Other early day churches were the Methodists, the Baptists, the Lutherans and the Catholics. Rev. Isaac McCoy organized a Baptist congregation in 1822, but it died out and did not become a permanent local church until 1837 with Rev. Tinsdale as pastor. Lutheranism began here the same year with an organized congregation of which Rev. Jesse Hoover was pastor. The first Catholic priest serving a regular charge here was Rev. S. P. Lalmiere in 1835.

As a congregation Methodism began its history here in 1830, a congregation being organized that year by Rev. James Hargraves with Rev. Nehemiah Griffith as pastor. Methodism, however, claims to date its history in Fort Wayne to six years before this time, to 1824, when Rev. James Holman, a local preacher, came here as a settler and purchased a farm in what is now known as Nebraska. He was an earnest, zealous Christian. He labored with his hands during the week and on Sundays held religious services in his log cabin home. He also preached at homes for miles around wherever hearers could be found.

The predominating characteristic of these pioneer preachers was their zeal. They were revivalists of the distinctive type of those days. They preached the gospel as they understood it, and were strong in their warnings to sinners "to flee from the wrath to come." Fear of future punishment was a more prominent feature of their discourses than the love of God. They yearned to snatch the soul from a literal burning hell and place it in paradise in heaven. There were no modern liberal ideas, easy-to-live Christianity, about their hour-and-a-half sermons.

The Churches Today.

In the march of time the churches of Fort Wayne have kept pace with the growth of the city and with commercialism. They have kept pace with sin also and are working with as great zeal today for man's uplift as at any time in the history of the past, more so, in fact.

Fort Wayne is a city of churches. It has within its limits, with its population of 64,000 souls, fifty churches, one for every 1,280 souls, all of them with pastors who are active and zealous in Christian work. In church membership the Catholic and Lutheran denominations lead, the two being about equal. It is probable they represent two-thirds of the church membership in Fort Wayne. And it is probable that one-third of the people in Fort Wayne do not belong to any church. There are many hundreds who do not enter church doors from one year's end to another unless called there by a funeral.

After the family dinner which Mr. and Mrs. James Fox, of McMillan street, gave in celebration of their golden wedding yesterday afternoon, they were astonished by the announcement made by their daughter, Miss Roseale, of her engagement to Albert L. Grabenstatter, formerly of Cleveland, but now employed at the Fort Wayne Printing company. Miss Fox had insisted upon her mother inviting Mr. Grabenstatter to the dinner, in spite of the fact that it was a family affair, but no one suspected the young people's real reason. The announcement was received with great pleasure, as Mr. Grabenstatter has already won the esteem and admiration of the family. Miss Fox is both pretty and fine looking and has many beautiful traits of character. She is a stenographer for the Archer Printing company and has many devoted friends. There were many callers at the Fox home during the day of old friends who desired to extend congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Fox on having reached their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Among them was Rev. M. J. Berne, of Lafayette. The house was decorated for the occasion with yellow chrysanthemums, ferns and smilax, and over the dinner table hung a yellow cupid with arms full of yellow blossoms. Beneath it stood a basket filled with dwarf chrysanthemums and in many small bouquets tied to the handle of the basket were presented gifts of gold from the children to the parents.

One of the recent wedding anniversary celebrations took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Buck, of Fourth street, who invited friends to dinner in honor of their tin wedding. The house was beautifully decorated with plants, ferns and flowers and in the diningroom the table as well as the rooms was done in green and white. The chandelier was entwined with smilax and ropes of the green came to the corners of the table where they were held with white bows. In the center of the table was a bouquet of smilax surrounding the dish and on each plate was a candlestick with smilax around it. The dessert course of the dinner was especially appropriate as the ice cream appeared in the form of a wedding ball. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kruse, Mr. and Mrs. John Hengstler, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Dresler, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Van, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cornish, Miss Eva Van and Walter Garvey.

Miss Wilhelmina Seemeyer is in Schumm, O., visiting relatives. Nathan Smyser and Dr. Lane, of Chicago, were guests for the week-end of Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Smyser.

Mrs. August John and son, who were visiting Mrs. August Crull, have returned to Milwaukee.

Misses Clara and Ruth Colchin, of Waterloo, Iowa, are visiting relatives here.

Miss Martha Phillely, of Victoria, avenue, has come to Chicago for a month's visit.

Miss Ethelred Naylor went to Chicago on Saturday for a few days' visit with relatives.

Miss Maida Zulich, who had been visiting Miss Clara Thorne, has returned home.

Eugene Hulson is entertaining Ned Newell, of Goshen, at his home in West Wayne street.

Mrs. W. A. Doctor has come to spend a few days with her niece, who lives in St. Louis, Mo.

Miss Nell Breckman has returned to the state university after spending the Thanksgiving holidays here.

STYLISH KIMONO BLOUSE

(By MRS. JANE FORD.)

734
6 SIZES 32 TO 42 BUST

This season the question of blouses is important, because every woman, whether she makes an attempt at elaborate dressing or strives only for plain effects, must give her waist special attention. This being the case, any model that has smart lines and is simple and easy to make will find many admirers who will want the pattern, and the blouse pictured here fills all these requirements. The design for it is cut in six sizes that run from thirty-two to forty-two inches bust measure.

For wear with a coat suit this model will be attractive if developed in silk or in marquisette laid over a silk lining.

If this blouse is to complete a costume, broadcloth, cashmere, henrietta, challis, muslin, or some of the novelty silks and woolen weaves would be an excellent selection.

In order to cut the waist as pictured without pleating, the goods must be thirty-six or more inches wide and one and one-quarter yards will be needed.

To make a model in this type the trimming and yoke material are as important factors as the choice of the goods for the blouse.

As trimming for the garment bands of net braided or embroidered will be effective on chiffon or marquisette.

The yoke of such a blouse could be of net in a matching color laid over gold or silver cloth.

If the waist is to form part of a costume, the banding could be of silk and the yoke of baby Irish or Cluny lace. If an elaborate dress is wanted, the yoke band of the silk could be shaped so it would extend in points on the front of the waist. The edges could be couched with heavy silk floss in the same color, but a shade or two lighter than the silk.

Hand embroidery, cleverly arranged so it lies over the edges of the silk bands and parts extend on the cloth, will add to the attractive appearance of the waist. If more elaboration is needed, inserts of lace that match in pattern with that used for the yoke would be effective and harmonious. This lace should be caught around the edges to the material, invisibly, and the goods cut from beneath.

It may interest women who like this waist pattern to know that a skirt model which will harmonize with the blouse will be published on the woman's page of The Sentinel on Wednesday, November 30.

One quart of milk, two well beaten eggs, butter and lard each the size of an egg, one tablespoonful of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of soda, two tablespoonfuls of flour, sufficient Indian meal to make a thick drop batter. Melt the butter, mix all the ingredients, except the soda, together, and beat hard for ten minutes. Add

Butter a deep dish of agateware and put a layer of the prepared potato round the bottom and sides. Pick over and drain one solid quart of oysters; prepare one cupful of sauce with one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour and one-half of a cupful each of oyster liquor and cream of rich milk. Season to taste with pepper and salt, put in the oysters and stir over the fire until the gills just begin to ruffle. Take from the fire, add the juice of one lemon, the beaten yolks of two raw eggs and one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley. Turn all into the dish, spread the remainder of the mashed potatoes over the oysters, brush with a beaten egg and brown in a very hot oven. Serve at once.

PRACTICAL HOME HELPS.

How to Retouch an Oil Painting.

Remove each painting from its frame and wipe with a soft cloth all dust from the canvas. Examine the canvas for fly specks and moisten all such with a few drops of clear water. They will probably soften in a few minutes, but if not wet them again. Should they remain obdurate, apply stale beer in the same way.

Having removed the fly specks take a soft sponge, moisten it in tepid water and holding the painting at an angle wash it.

If you find during this operation that the surface becomes slimy or sticky, you will have solved the secret of the picture's dull appearance and well know that it has been coated with sugar, white of egg, gum arabic or isinglass—a process used by artists before varnish is put on.

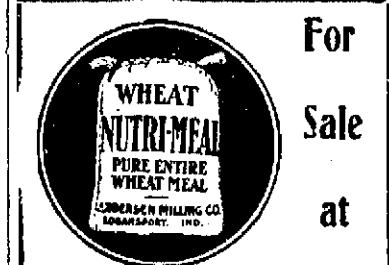

This glaze must be removed by sponging with warm water and the painting allowed to dry thoroughly, after which it will be ready for varnishing.

This work should be done with a soft, flat bristle brush and French retouching varnish, both of which may be obtained from a first class dealer in artists' supplies. A stiff, coarse brush will leave lines, so such an article must not be experimented with.

To varnish a picture place the canvas flat on a table between yourself and the light and draw the brush straight across the face from side to side, taking care neither to leave any unvarnished spots nor to go over the same place more than once, as a double layer of varnish will show when dry.

The canvas should be kept free from dust until the varnish is hard; then it may be returned to its frame.

The trade of Chile is $100,000,000 a year, and it will soon reach $150,000,000. The share of the United States in 1910 will be about $8,300,000.

DYEING HAIR THAT IS GRAY IN PATCHES IMPOSSIBLE FOR AMATEUR.

An Expert Can Match Dye With Faded or Partially Gray Hair, But Such Feat Can Be Accomplished Only After Hard Study and Years of Experience.

One of the impossible feats for a woman to accomplish is to color patches of her hair so all will be the same shade. I choose this subject because recently I have received an unusual number of such requests from correspondents, and I want them to understand why I discourage them in any such attempt.

Every woman who has such a desire must understand that only a skilled professional can color patches successfully, because the effect of dyes differs, according to the shade and quality of the hair to which it is applied. The hair itself must be seen and carefully studied by one attempting to match faded or gray spots. A woman wishing to match a shaded dress material would not send a few threads of it to a shop and expect to get what she wanted. She would send enough of a sample to enable the clerk to get the whole effect.

But matching hair is even more difficult; that is, matching the color when streaks have faded, because quality so largely enters in. It would be useless for a woman to send a lock of her hair, declaring at the same time that she wanted to make the gray the natural color, because no two patches of gray are precisely the same. And even if they were, and proper dye were made, no amateur could apply it with sufficient care to make the colored portion look other than what it is—a patch.

Coloring patches successfully may be done by a professional if a woman will give time for the treatment. It is no secret that I am violently opposed to dyeing hair, because the coloring matter, however harmless, eventually injures the locks, because of the treatment to which the scalp and hair must be subjected in order that the coloring will stay on.

Before applying dye the natural oil must be extracted by washing the hair in strong soda or ammonia water, and the result of such a shampoo is to starve the hair follicles and when this condition occurs, the locks break and fall. It is an unwise woman who applies dye to her hair, and I have yet to know of one who, having done so, did not some time regret the fact.

When the hair begins to turn gray, or to lose its color in faded effect, it may be that the scalp lacks nourishment. In any event, good, thorough brushing daily, massage once or twice a week, and the application of a good tonic are likely to prevent the condition from becoming worse, and not infrequently given and improve the tresses.

A tonic that may be life giving at such a crisis is made from one-half dram each of terebinth, borax and sulphur, and three ounces of lavender water. This is rubbed into the scalp nightly.

When the hair is dry and seems to be fading, rather than turning gray, an ointment which may be helpful can be made from one ounce each of morcury ointment and oil of ergot. It may be scented. It should be rubbed into the scalp every night.

HENS EAT POPPIES; EGGS GIVE THRILL

Policeman Owner Has All
Sorts of Pleasant
Dreams.
UPSETS HIS HENNERY

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—After Harry Roseberg, a Pittsburg policeman, read the experiences of some Jersey chickens with whisky he told neighbors how his chickens had become dope fiends and are laying eggs that are dopey, too. Sadly enough, however, the hens are so taken up with the new fad that they are not paying so much attention to the laying of eggs as formerly.

Poppies—of the same sort that are grown by the acre in China for the opium supply—are the cause of the unfortunate state of affairs in the Roseberg henneries. In the rush for the poppy seed all class distinction among the chickens has been cast aside and Roseberg will swear that the most haughty Rhode Island Reds are seen in the company of Plymouth Rocks and even just chickens.

Roseberg wondered what in the world possessed his chickens when he discovered his flock the other day lying about the henyard as if unconscious. An expert, summoned hastily, declared the chickens were suffering from a peculiar form of intoxication.

The following day nearly all had recovered and were moving about, but no sooner were they released from the hen house than they made a break for their grazing lands—a back patch of the Roseberg lawn. Curious to see what effect the opium would have on the hens, Roseberg gave them more freedom in the lawn and the state of their intoxication increased daily.

As Roseberg had anticipated, too, the supply of eggs laid by the hens became smaller, and those he did get had a strange taste when cooked. Roseberg ate of them freely—in the interest of science, of course. And again, just as he had anticipated, the effect of the poppy seeds was passed on. He experienced a pleasant feeling and finally sleep, with delightful dreams. He became the head of the department of public safety, the henneries were turned into a golden chariot, with him as the occupant, and all his chickens developed into ostriches and hauled him hither and thither along pleasant paths. And not only that, but almost every Chinaman in town was in the market for Roseberg eggs at fabulous prices.

Croup is most prevalent during the dry cold weather of the early winter months. Parents of young children should be prepared for it. All that is needed is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many mothers are never without it in their homes and it has never disappointed them. Sold by all dealers.

THE WAITER IN LITERATURE.

Someone Has Said It Is to Him That Dickens Owes His Popularity.

(Scribner's Magazine.)

Dickens' popularity is enduring, someone has said, because there is so much eating and drinking in his novels. Say, rather, because there are so many waiters. Find me a chapter in Dickens, through whose pages there is no waiter slipping in and out; where Mr. Weller, sr., fails to call for a double glass of the invariable, and there is no such incident as this:

"Here, waiter," shouted the stranger, ringing the bell with tremendous violence, "glasses around—brandy and water, hot and strong, and sweet, and plenty!"

All the world loves a waiter—his fresh linen (so long as it is fresh); his flirtatious napkin; his good natured encouragement of the appetite; his waddling motion, confined to the lower torso. Why is "You Never Can Tell" the pleasantest of Mr. Shaw's "Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant" if it be not, thanks to good William, an infinitely more lovable figure than his accomplished son, the barrister?

I speak not of your waiters who are not waiters—those who only ask briskly, "Beg pardon, sir; wish see bedroom?"—it is the waiter with something to eat and drink in each hand and a polite invitation to be merry, that I have in mind. At public dinners, even in Dickens, waiters are not themselves:

"Tureens of soup are emptied with awful rapidity—waiters take plates of turbot away, to get lobster sauce, and bring back plates of lobster sauce without turbot"—and the whole rite is spoiled for us by the interference on the speaker's part that robs the waiter of his sacred character. In "Pickwick Papers" two waiters play, with Weller, jr., leading roles in that famous Bateman's contest of Slumkey vs. Fitzkin; "pumpkin" over the independent voters, as Mr. Weller expresses it to Mr. Pickwick, "fat a shilling a head." But it is not for his activity in the political sphere that one most highly values the waiter; nor are we much attracted by that description of the White Horse collar, with its uncomfortable travelers' room, "divided into boxes for the solitary confinement of travelers," and furnished with a clock, a looking glass and a live waiter; which latter article is kept in a small kennel for washing glasses, in a corner of the apartment; for here the waiter is "a man with a dirty complexion, and a towel of the same." This is but a poor apology for a noble species, such as we have at its best in one of the Christmas stories and in the "Copperfield."

The old, old story, told times without number, and repeated over and over again for the last 36 years, but it is always a welcome story to those in search of health—There is nothing in the world that cures coughs and colds as quickly as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

His name is George H. Hensley, and he is the sexton of the Congregational church of the village.

Now, a man who had been around the world before he was seventeen; who has crossed the continent thirty-one times as a chef on a dining car; who has served through the civil war, and who has been sent abroad by one of the famous hotel men of Boston to study methods of cookery in France, is bound to be an interesting person if he can be induced to talk—and Mr. Hensley will talk if he has a good listener.

In the course of a conversation upon cooking the story of the making of the first Parker house rolls was told to the writer of this article.

"I had been one of the cooks at the Parker house for some time," said Mr. Hensley, "when one day, while another man and myself were preparing some rolls, we were told that a certain chambermaid in the house had been accused of robbing one of the guests of some valuable jewelry. We were greatly indignant upon hearing this story, as we liked this girl and knew she was incapable of committing the theft. In our excited talk over the matter, we whacked and cut at the dough before us with the greatest possible energy. We discussed the situation from all possible standpoints, and continually emphasized our points by cutting and recutting the doughy mass before us.

"After this meal at which the rolls upon which we had worked so vigorously were served, Mr. Parker came to me and said: 'Hensley, how did you make those rolls that we served to-night?' The guests are talking about them. They say they are the best rolls we ever served in the house. Hereafter I want you to make them exactly as you made them tonight.'"

And so, from an indignation meeting of two cooks, came the delicious rolls that have pleased the appetites of so many thousands.

It was a case where "out of the bitter came forth sweet."

Mr. Parker afterwards took so much interest in young Hensley that he sent him to France to study methods of preparing flavoring substances.

After the family dinner which Mr. and Mrs. James Fox, of McClellan street, gave in celebration of their golden wedding yesterday afternoon, they were astonished by the announcement made by their daughter, Miss Rosalie, of her engagement to Albert L. Grabenstatter, formerly of Cleveland, but now employed at the Fort Wayne Printing company. Miss Fox had insisted upon her mother inviting Mr. Grabenstatter to the dinner, in spite of the fact that it was a family affair, but no one suspected the young people's real reason. The announcement was received with great pleasure as Mr. Grabenstatter has already won the esteem and admiration of the family. Miss Fox is both pretty and fine looking and has many beautiful traits of character. She is a stenographer for the Archer Printing company and has many devoted friends. There were many callers at the Fox home during the day of old friends who desired to extend congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Fox on having reached their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Among them was Rev. M. J. Berne, of LaGrange. The house was decorated for the occasion with yellow chrysanthemums, ferns and smilax, and over the dinner table hung a yellow cupid with arms full of yellow blossoms. Beneath it stood a basket filled with dwarf chrysanthemums and in many small bouquets tied to the handle of the basket were concealed gifts of gold from the children to the parents.

One of the recent wedding anniversary celebrations took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Buck, of Fourth street, who invited friends to dinner in honor of their tin wedding. The house was beautifully decorated with plants, ferns and flowers and in the diningroom the table as well as the rooms was done in green and white. The chandelier was entwined with smilax and ropes of the green came to the corners of the table where they were held with white bows. In the center of the table was a bowl of bride roses and on the cloth was a wreath of smilax surrounding the dish and at each place was a candlestick with smilax around it. The dessert course of the dinner was especially appropriate as the ice cream appeared in the form of a wedding bell. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kruse, Mr. and Mrs. John Hengstler, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Duesler, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ulan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cornish, Miss Eva Ulan and Walter Garver.

Miss Wilhelmina Seemeyer is in Schumm, O. visiting relatives. Nathan Smyser and Dr. Lane, of Chicago, were guests for the week-end of Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Smyser. Mrs. August John and son, who were visiting Mrs. August Crull, have returned to Milwaukee.

Misses Clara and Ruth Colechin, of Waterloo, Iowa, are visiting relatives here. Miss Martha Philley, of Victoria, has gone to Chicago for a month's visit.

Miss Ethelred Naylor went to Chicago on Saturday for a few days' visit with relatives.

STYLISH KIMONO BLOUSE

(By MRS. JANE FORD.)

734
6 SIZES 32 TO 42 BUST

This season the question of blouses is important, because every woman, whether she makes an attempt at elaborate dressing or strives only for plain effects, must give her waists special attention. This being the case, any model that has smart lines and is simple and easy to make will find many admirers who will want the pattern, and the blouse pictured here fills all these requirements. The design for it is cut in six sizes that run from thirty-two to forty-two inches bust measure.

For wear with a coat suit this model will be attractive if developed in silk or in marquisette laid over a silk lining.

If this blouse is to complete a costume, broadcloth, cashmere, hosiery, chamois, silk, or some of the novel silk and woolen weaves would be an excellent selection.

In order to cut the waist as pictured without piecing, the goods must be thirty-six or more inches wide and one and one-quarter yards will be needed.

To make a model in this type the trimming and yoke material are as important factors as the choice of the goods for the blouse.

As trimming for the garment bands of net braided or embroidered will be effective on chiffon or marquisette.

The yoke of such a blouse could be of net in a matching color laid over gold or silver cloth.

If the waist is to form part of a costume, the banding could be of silk and the yoke of baby Irish or Cluny lace. If an elaborate dress is wanted, the yoke band of the silk could be shaped so it would extend in points on the front of the waist. The edges could be couched with heavy silk does in the same color, but a shade or two lighter than the silk.

Hand embroidery, cleverly arranged so it lies over the edges of the silk bands and parts extend on the cloth, will add to the attractive appearance of the waist. If more elaboration is needed, inserts of lace that match in pattern with that used for the yoke would be effective and harmonious.

This lace should be caught around the edges to the material, invisibly, and the goods cut from beneath.

It may interest women who like this waist pattern to know that a skirt model which will harmonize with the blouse will be published on the woman's page of The Sentinel on Wednesday, November 30.

Johnny Cake.

One quart of milk, two well beaten eggs, butter and lard each the size of an egg, one tablespoonful of brown sugar, one teaspoonful of soda, two tablespoonfuls of flour, sufficient Indian meal to make a thick drop batter. Melt the butter, mix all the ingredients, except the soda, together, and heat hard for ten minutes. Add the soda, dissolved in a tablespoonful of hot water, beat for a moment longer, pour into a buttered pan of such size that the cake will be not much more than an inch thick and bake slowly in a moderate oven. Serve hot, breaking it into squares.

Oyster Pie.

Peel and boil one quart of potatoes. When done put through a potato press, add one tablespoonful of butter, the yolks of two raw eggs and a high seasoning of salt and cayenne. Butter a deep dish of agateware and put a layer of the prepared potato round the bottom and sides. Pick over and drain one solid quart of oysters; prepare one cupful of sauce with one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour and one-half of a cupful each of oyster liquor and cream of rich milk. Season to taste with pepper and salt, put in the oysters and stir over the fire until the gills just begin to ruffle. Take from the fire, add the juice of one lemon, the beaten yolks of two raw eggs and one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley. Turn all into the dish, spread the remainder of the mashed potatoes over the oysters, brush with a beaten egg and brown in a very hot oven. Serve at once.

DYEING HAIR THAT IS GRAY IN PATCHES IMPOSSIBLE FOR AMATEUR.

An Expert Can Match Dye With Faded or Partially Gray Hair, But Such Feat Can Be Accomplished Only After Hard Study and Years of Experience.

One of the impossible feats for a woman to accomplish is to color patches of her hair so all will be the same shade. I choose this subject because recently I have received an unusual number of such requests from correspondents, and I want them to understand why I discourage them in any such attempt.

Every woman who has such a defect must understand that only a skilled professional can color patches successfully, because the effect of dyes differs, according to the shade and quality of the hair to which it is applied. The hair itself must be seen and carefully studied by one attempting to match faded or gray spots. A woman wishing to match a shaded dress material would not send a few threads of it to a shop and expect to get what she wanted. She would send enough of a sample to enable the clerk to get the whole effect.

But matching hair is even more difficult; that is matching the color when streaks have faded, because quality so largely enters in. It would be useless for a woman to send a lock of her hair, declaring at the same time that she wanted to make the gray the natural color, because no two patches of gray are precisely the same. And even if they were, and proper dye were made, no amateur could apply it with sufficient care to make the colored portion look other than what it is—a patch.

Coloring patches successfully may be done by a professional if a woman will give time for the treatment. It is no secret that I am violently opposed to dyeing hair, because the coloring matter, however harmless, eventually injures the locks, because of the treatment to which the scalp and hair must be subjected in order that the coloring will stay on.

Before applying dye the natural oil must be extracted by washing the hair in strong soda or ammonia water, and the result of such a shampoo is to starve the hair follicles and when this condition occurs, the locks break and fall. It is an unwise woman who applies dye to her hair, and I have yet to know of one who, having done so, did not some time regret the fact.

When the hair begins to turn gray, or to lose its color in faded effect, it may be that the scalp lacks nourishment. In any event, good, thorough brushing daily, massage once or twice a week, and the application of a good tonic are likely to prevent the condition from becoming worse, and not infrequently even and improve the tresses.

A tonic that may be life giving at such a crisis is made from one-half dram each of terebinth, horax and sulphur, and three ounces of lavender water. This is rubbed into the scalp nightly.

When the hair is dry and seems to be fading, rather than turning gray, an ointment which may be helpful can be made from one ounce each of mercury ointment and oil of ergot. It may be scented. It should be rubbed into the scalp every night.

HENS EAT POPPIES; EGGS GIVE THRILL

Policeman Owner Has All
Sorts of Pleasant Dreams.

UPSETS HIS HENNERY

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—After Harry Roseberg, a Pittsburg policeman, read the experiences of some Jersey chickens with whisky he told neighbors how his chickens had become dope fiends and are laying eggs that are dopey, too. Sadly enough, however, the hens are so taken up with the new fad that they are not paying so much attention to the laying of eggs as formerly.

Poppies—of the same sort that are grown by the acre in China for the opium supply—are the cause of the unfortunate state of affairs in the Roseberg henneries. In the rush for the poppy seed all class distinction among the chickens has been cast aside and Roseberg will swear that the most haughty Rhode Island Reds are seen in the company of Plymouth Rocks and even just chickens.

Roseberg wondered what in the world possessed his chickens when he discovered his flock the other day lying about the henyard as if unconscious. An expert, summoned hastily, declared the chickens were suffering from a peculiar form of intoxication.

The following day nearly all had recovered and were moving about, but no sooner were they made a break for their grazing lands—a back patch of the Roseberg lawn. Curious to see what effect the opium would have on the hens, Roseberg gave them more freedom in the lawn and the state of their intoxication increased daily.

As Roseberg had anticipated, too, the supply of eggs laid by the hens became smaller, and those he did get had a strange taste when cooked. Roseberg ate of them freely—in the interest of science, of course. And again, just as he had anticipated, the effect of the poppy seeds was passed on. He experienced a pleasant feeling and finally sleep, with delightful dreams. He became the head of the department of public safety, the henneries were turned into a golden chariot, with him as the occupant, and all his chickens developed into ostriches and hauled him hither and thither along pleasant paths. And not only that, but almost every Chinaman in town was in the market for Roseberg eggs at fabulous prices.

Group is most prevalent during the dry cold weather of the early winter months. Parents of young children should be prepared for it. All that is needed is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many mothers are never without it in their homes and it has never disappointed them. Sold by all dealers.

THE WAITER IN LITERATURE.

Someone Has Said It Is to Him That Dickens Owes His Popularity.

(Scribner's Magazine.)

Dickens' popularity is enduring, someone has said, because there is so much eating and drinking in his novels. Say, rather, because there are so many waiters. Find me a chapter in Dickens, through whose pages there is no waiter slipping in and out; where Mr. Weller, sr., fails to call for a double glass of the invariable, and there is no such incident as this:

"Here, waiter," shouted the stranger, ringing the bell with tremendous violence, "glasses around—brandy and water, hot and strong, and sweet, and plenty!"

All the world loves a waiter—his fresh line (as long as it is fresh); his flirtatious manner; his good natured encouragement of the appetite; his waddling motion, confined to the lower leg. Why is "You Never Can Tell" the pleasantest of Mr. Shaw's "Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant"? If it be not, thanks to good William, an infinitely more lovable figure than his accomplished son, the barrister?

I speak not of your waiters who are not waiters—those who only ask briskly, "Beg pardon, sir; wish see bedroom?"—it is the waiter with something to eat and drink in each hand and a polite invitation to be merry, that I have in mind. At public dinners, even in Dickens, waiters are not themselves:

"Tureens of soup are emptied with awful rapidity—waiters take plates of turbot away, to get lobster sauce, and bring back plates of lobster sauce without turbot—and the whole rite is spoiled for us by the interference on the speaker's part that robs the waiter of his sacred character. In "Pickwick Papers" two waiters play, with Weller, jr., leading roles in that famous Bateman's contest of Stumkey vs. Plinkin; "pumpkin" over the independent voters," as Mr. Weller expresses it to Mr. Pickwick, "at a shilling a head." But it is not for his activity in the political sphere that one most highly values the waiter; nor are we much attracted by that description of the White Horse cellar, with its uncomfortable travelers' room, "divided into boxes for the solitary confinement of travelers," and furnished with a clock, a looking glass and a live waiter; which latter article is kept in a small kennel for washing glasses, in a corner of the apartment; for here the waiter is "a man with a dirty complexion, and a towel of the same." This is but a poor apology for a noble species, such as we have at its best in one of the Christmas stories and in the "Copperfield."

The old, old story, told times without number, and repeated over and over again for the last 25 years, but it is always a welcome story to those in search of health—There is nothing in the world that cures coughs and colds as quickly as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

The old, old story, told times without number, and repeated over and over again for the last 25 years, but it is always a welcome story to those in search of health—There is nothing in the world that cures coughs and colds as quickly as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

In the course of a conversation upon cooking the story of the making of the first Parker house rolls was told to the writer of this article.

"I had been one of the cooks at the Parker house for some time," said Mr. Hensley, "when one day, while another man and myself were preparing some rolls, we were told that a certain chambermaid in the house had been accused of robbing one of the guests of some valuable jewelry. We were greatly indignant upon hearing this story, as we liked this girl and knew she was incapable of committing the theft. In our excited talk over the matter, we whacked and cut at the dough before us with the greatest possible energy. We discussed the situation from all possible standpoints, and continually emphasized our points by cutting and recutting the doughy mass before us.

"After the meal at which the rolls upon which we had worked so vigorously were served, Mr. Parker came to me and said: 'Hensley, how did you make those rolls that we served to-night? The guests are talking about them. They say they are the best rolls we ever served in the house. Hereafter I want you to make them exactly as you made them tonight.' And so, from an indignation meeting of two cooks, came the delicious rolls that have pleased the appetites of so many thousands.

It was a case where "out of the bitter came forth sweet."

Mr. Parker afterwards took so much interest in young Hensley that he sent him to France to study methods of preparing flavoring substances.

Lame back comes on suddenly and is extremely painful. It is caused by rheumatism of the muscles. Quick relief is afforded by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Sold by all dealers.

CONSCRIPTION IS URGED FOR ARMY

General Grant Would Bring Military Standard Up to War Powers.

IT SHOULD BE 250,000

New York, Nov. 23.—Major General Frederick Dent Grant, commanding the department of the east, would inaugurate a system of conscription in the United States in order to bring the country up to the military standards of the war powers of Europe. In his headquarters on Governor's island he explained to a reporter the scheme he would enforce had he the power.

"I do not expect to see it put in effect in my time or yours," he said, "but that it will eventually come I have no doubt."

"By increasing our army to 250,000 we could in a few years have among the people engaged in peaceful occupations 1,000,000 men trained to the military service. The present authorized strength of our army is 100,000, but we have actually in the service only 88,000 men, because congress has refused to make the appropriations needed to support the full quota."

Without Skilled Soldiers. "Should we be suddenly forced into war, we could not expand the army quickly enough to meet possible emergencies. Congress, of course, would authorize at once the enlistment of as many men and the purchase of as many stores as might be required, but, as we would have virtually no skilled soldiers to draw upon, we could neither fill our ranks with efficient fighting men nor handle the stores with that necessary expedition that comes only from experience. In such an event the result would be to prolong the war until its cost in blood and treasure would far exceed what it would have been had we been prepared."

In the execution of his scheme General Grant would divide the country into military districts and require each district to provide the enlarged army every year with a quota of recruits to be determined by the military authorities, based upon population.

"New York state," said the general, "might constitute one district by itself. Its population is so great. If New York has a population of 8,000,000, the state will be required to furnish eight times as many recruits as a state or group of states having only 1,000,000."

"Would the proposed 75 per cent. increase in the enlisted strength of the army entail upon the country a corresponding increase of cost?" was asked.

Cost Less Than Doubled. "Not by a great deal," replied General Grant. "As I estimate it, such an increase in the size of the army would not increase its cost 50 per cent. The present cost of the army is about $123,000,000. The addition of 150,000 men probably would not run the cost up to more than $200,000,000. We have already in hand more than enough equipment for an army of 250,000. We also have barracks and post accommodations for an army even larger than the one I suggest."

"But a much higher national purpose would be achieved than any of the things to which I have referred," added General Grant, with enthusiasm. "As I said before, we would have among the people 1,000,000 or more men skilled in military tactics and the duties of camp and field, who in case of war would be seasoned soldiers when they rejoined the colors. Even higher, though, than this would be the uplifting and educational influence every one of these men would exert in his community. Each man would carry back with him into civil life respect for law, regularity of habit, industry, disciplined conduct and an understanding of the value of sanitation. With that sort of influence in every community in the United States, it would not be a long time before the mob spirit which too often asserts itself would disappear."

Takes Germany as Example. "I have seen the sort of change I have in mind for my own country wrought in Germany. With the establishment of the German empire by Bismarck came compulsory military service. Prior to that the German was awkward and ungainly. His education was poor. National patriotism was not pronounced. No assertive feeling of race unity was noticeable. Now mark the change. Travelers are agreed that Germany today is the cleanest and neatest country on the globe, and that as a class the men of Germany carry themselves better than do the men of any other nation."

"The death rate has decreased under the empire, owing to the knowledge of practical sanitation which the carefully trained German soldier carries back with him into civil life. Mob violence is unknown in the empire, because of the many millions of its men who have imbibed respect for law from their experience in the army."

"With an increased army in the United States, these results would manifest themselves quicker here than they did in Germany."

Victim of New York Trunk Crime

ALBERT C. CALLIER MISSING ARTIST FRIEND OF WILLIAM LEWIS.

Investigation by the police into the murder revealed five days ago by the discovery of a man's body in a trunk that was hidden for seven years in the basement of the tenement building at No. 450 West Fifty-fourth street, New York, brought to light more facts concerning the life of William Lewis whose name appears as owner of the trunk.

By far the most important facts obtained were those showing beyond doubt that Lewis was in this city at a date later than July, 1905, when he was last seen by his friend, Philip Meagher, in whose care the trunk had been placed. Lewis appeared at the home of Mrs. Mary Kenny, of No. 302 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street, for

A short visit on the afternoon of February 13, 1906.

It is now believed that the victim in the trunk was Albert C. Callier, an artist, who at one time was a friend of Lewis, but has since disappeared.

FLYER MAKES
NEW RECORD

Has Nine Cars on Trip
From New York to Chicago

FIRST TRAIN OUT
OF NEW STATION

Demand for Reservations
Heaviest in History, of "Special."

In size of train and number of passengers the Pennsylvania Special, No. 28, westbound, broke all previous records today. This was the first solid steel car through passenger train bound for Chicago out of the new passenger station in New York and it had to turn away business, so great was the demand for accommodations. The train had nine cars and each was loaded to its capacity. It went to Chicago on schedule time, though it was nine minutes behind time when it was delivered to the Western division at Crestline. On this division Conductor Charles Ross had charge of the train, which was hauled by two engines. From Crestline to Fort Wayne Engineer Michael Lacey and Fireman Joseph Stevens and Engineer Frank Simonton and Fireman M. E. Glass were in the cabs and from this city to Chicago Engineer George Miller and Fireman A. R. Dickey and Engineer Frank M. Enslin and Fireman C. R. Sheckler were in the cabs.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

Pennsy Veteran Association Makes Plans for Future.

The membership roll of the Pennsylvania Employees' Veteran association now contains about 125 names, but a year hence it will probably have three times that many names. This is the belief of the executive committee, which met in the Pennsylvania motive power office Saturday afternoon to discuss the situation relative to the association and to plan for active work the coming winter months. Engineer S. S. Kelker, president of the association, presided at the meeting and among the participants were P. J. Scheid, J. H. Robyans, Charles T. Mattoit, J. H. Hobrock, James Trythall, Chester Durnell, J. H. Westerman and Thomas Potter. A canvass of the field for eligible timber for membership in the association, which requires a continuous service with the Pennsylvania of twenty-five years or more, revealed the fact that there are 500 men on the payroll of the Western division, including those who are now on the retired list, and a personal appeal to each is to be made to join the association. It is believed that very few of them will refuse. At the annual banquet in October it was decided to give an entertainment and banquet for the wives and daughters of the association members and that matter came up for discussion last night. On account of the nearness of Christmas, however, it was decided to postpone action until after the holidays, but the entertainment will be given some time this winter. Twelve applicants were added to the membership at the meeting Saturday.

RAMSEY IS IN CONTROL.

Buy 50,000 More Shares of the Ann Arbor.

At a public sale in New York last Friday, which absolutely divorced the Ann Arbor road from the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton, and deprived Eugene Zimmerman of all interest in the Ann Arbor's affairs, Joseph Ramsey, Jr., formerly president of the Wabash, came into full control of the Ann Arbor. He purchased 50,000 shares for the noteholders of the Ann Arbor, which means that he will continue in the management of the road. Joseph Ramsey went to the Ann Arbor last spring under conditions which made his stay there a very uncertain matter.

MANY TONS OF CANDY.

Eight Car Loads of the Sweets Leave City Tonight.

Two mammoth trucks and a half dozen men were busy all of today conveying barrels, buckets and boxes of candy from the factory of The Holt-Miller-Lau company, on East Jefferson street, to the Pennsylvania freight house, where they are being loaded into cars. This candy will make eight car loads and it will leave the city tonight for points in Indiana, Michigan and Ohio reached by the Pennsylvania and the Grand Rapids and Indiana roads. It is the largest shipment of candy ever made in a single day from Fort Wayne and possibly from any town in the central states. Last year The Holt-Miller-Lau company shipped in a similar manner over the Pennsylvania and G. R. & I. roads six car loads in one day, which surpassed all previous shipments, but business has been better this year and the shipments correspondingly heavier. Of course other shipments were made today by the candy factory, included being consignments over the Lake Shore and the Wabash—but particular attention was paid to the Pennsylvania and the G. R. & I. towns today.

WANT TO BE ALONE.

Nickel Plate Engineers Petition for Division.

Next Sunday the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers employed on the Nickel Plate will petition the B. L. E. higher officials and the Nickel Plate board of adjustment at Cleveland for permission to establish another division in Fort Wayne for Nickel Plate men only. Sixty engineers have already signed the petition and more are expected to do so, and as this is about two-thirds of the total number of B. L. E. men on the Western division, it is believed the petition will be granted. Nickel Plate engineers in Fort Wayne now belong to division 12. There is no controversy or ill feeling between them and the other members of the division, but the men back of the movement to organize another division feel that it is the best thing to do. At almost every other railway center the B. L. E. is divided into divisions according to the roads upon which the members are employed and it is argued that they are the better fitted to carry out the aims of the brotherhood. The membership list of division 12 contains employees of every railway entering Fort Wayne.

CARPENTERS GETTING BUSY.

J. C. Workman, one of the active labor leaders of the city, has been engaged as personal solicitor for the Carpenters and Joiners' union in a campaign for members during the winter. As far as possible Mr. Workman will call upon every carpenter in the city who is not a member of the union and endeavor to convince him that it is a duty he owes himself and his fellow craftsmen to join. In this way, and with the assistance of other members of the union, it is hoped to double the membership within three or four months. The open meetings are also to be a feature of the campaign and the next one will be held Thursday evening when Judge R. K. Erwin will deliver an address. A special effort will be made to have every carpenter in the city present at this meeting. In their campaign the carpenters will be given all possible assistance by the other unions affiliated with the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor. The Carpenters and Joiners will hold their annual election Thursday, December 8, and they expect a lively and interesting contest.

HOST AT STAG PARTY.

Ed Zimmerman, a gang foreman at the Pennsylvania erecting shop, was the unexpected host at a stag party Saturday night which was one of the most pleasant events of the week, the participants say. Mr. Zimmerman was 29 years old on that day and wishing to show their regard for him and at the same time have a good time, a number of his shopmates conceived and carried out a surprise party. The early part of the evening was spent in listening to music, in games and in social chat and a very palatable supper was served at 12 o'clock. The guests were E. C. Rehling, W. Tegtmeyer, C. Stahl, E. Wehmeyer, L. E. Rehling, H. Stude, F. Mayland, C. Prange, C. Muhlenbruch, H. Wellman and G. Herrmann.

CLAUDE HILL PROMOTED.

Claude C. Hill was in the city Saturday introducing F. D. Grant, who will hereafter look after the interest of the passenger department of the "Son" line in this territory, which has been so efficiently managed by Mr. Hill for about fifteen years. Mr. Hill was recently advanced in the ranks and while he will make a visit here now and then, he will not come in his old capacity and as frequently as of old. He will have headquarters in Chicago. Claude Hill is one of the best known and most popular traveling passenger agents in this territory.

LAST MEETING OF BOARD.

The meeting this evening of the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor will be the last of the board as now constituted. Before another meeting all of the unions affiliated with the federation will have held their annual elections. Of course, some of the delegates will be re-elected, but not all, and at the next meeting of the federation there will be a number of new faces. The present board did its work well and none has occasion to feel ashamed of the record.

HOLDING ANOTHER CONFERENCE.

The representatives of the various crafts employed in the shops of the Wabash are holding another conference with Motive Power Superintendent E. F. Needham and the master mechanics of the different divisions at Springfield. This is the third conference within as many weeks and it will probably result in an agreement on the chief points at issue—wages and working conditions.

SHOPMEN BACK AT WORK.

Felix Logan, who had been attending to private business several days; M. C. Gephart, J. J. Donahy and G. G. Meyer, who were off duty on account of injuries; E. H. C. Herschman, who had been sick; and C. A. Held, who had been out west, reported for work in the Pennsylvania machine shop this morning. Mr. Held was west six months and for awhile his return was considered an uncertainty.

TOOK JOBS AT SHOPS.

The demand for car builders and helpers at the Pennsylvania shops is gradually being filled, additions to the force being made daily. This morning Emil Stoll, Charles A. Marchand and William Kentline, passenger car builders, took employment there. The shop management is still looking for more good men.

GONE TO PENNSYLVANIA.

W. H. Korte, the carpenter who had a hand badly injured some weeks ago while at work in the Pennsylvania shops, is recovering and will resume work in a week or two. Tomorrow he will go to Pennsylvania to spend a few days with relatives and expects to resume work upon his return.

SAM SPEECE AT WORK.

Samuel P. Speece, the engineer on the passenger train which figured in the Indiana Harbor wreck two weeks ago, has recovered from his injuries and resumed his duties at the throttle. Mr. Speece was beneath the wreckage for a half hour or more and his escape from serious injury is considered miraculous.

LAND OFF FIFTY MEN.

The Lake Shore is making the usual reduction in the maintenance of way department and about fifty men will be laid off at all points on the line. Waterloo, which is headquarters for section men on the main line and branch, is the greatest sufferer.

CAR INSPECTOR PROMOTED.

Gus Kinder, a Pennsylvania car inspector, has gone to Valparaiso, Ind., to take charge of that work for the company. A. R. Jay, who formerly held the position, has taken a better job at Allentown with the company. He will take a foremanship there.

HAD THUMB CRUSHED.

A. Wefel, a carpenter at the Pennsylvania shops, had his right thumb crushed this morning by a coupling falling upon it. He will be unable to work for some days.

Charles Vaughn, assistant foreman at the Pennsylvania tank shop, and G. E. Buhr, a carpenter in that department, who were in the country shooting rabbits several days, resumed work this morning. The expedition was not the brilliant success expected of it.

Harvey Crane, at the head of the construction department of the Electric works, has returned from a business trip in the east, which consumed two weeks.

T. F. Fox, chief clerk to Supt. B. H. Hudson, of the G. R. & I., has resumed his office duties. He was off on a vacation, which he spent in Cleveland with relatives and friends.

Robert G. Schick, assistant foreman of the Bass boiler shop, has returned from Indianapolis, where he went a few days ago on business for the company.

Business Better Than Politics

Twelve years ago, with full faith in the new Indiana law made for the establishment of trust company banks, I organized the Citizens' Trust Company. I am now associated with that useful institution as its president. It has helped many to save money and build homes. It is an ideal savings bank—its plan the strongest that banking law can make. Its directors are well-known men of the highest order of business ability. Its secretary, Ernest W. Cook, is always agreeable to everyone and faithful to duty.

Harry C. Hofmeier, a G. R. & I. passenger conductor, has been temporarily assigned the task of devising means for preventing delays of trains at stations hereafter. He will investigate the causes and obliterate them as far as possible. One of the causes of delay, it is said, is the handling of baggage and express matter.

Subordinate lodges of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers are voting on the national officers of the brotherhood, as well as for the local lodge, and the result will be announced in a week or two. Considerable interest is being taken in the election, as each of the candidates has a strong following.

August Kayser, Robert Orr and Charles W. Hecker, of the Fort Wayne Electric works, went ten miles in the country Saturday afternoon for a few hours' hunt, riding in Mr. Kayser's automobile. When about to start on the home trip one of the tires exploded and the party had to abandon the auto and come home on the interurban.

Bert Sager, an employee of the Nickel Plate at Valparaiso, found a pocket-book on a seat in the company's depot last Thursday which contained over $120 in cash and a railway ticket to Fort Wayne. He turned the wallet over to the agent, who returned the property to the owner, Mrs. Williams, who came here on that day for a visit with friends.

HANDS CRACKED AND PEELING

Tried Many Remedies but Grew Worse
—Impossible to Do Housework
—Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"About six years ago my hands began to crack and peel. I tried many remedies, but they grew worse all the time. At last they became so sore that it was impossible for me to do my housework. If I put my hands in water I was in agony. I tried to cook, but the heat caused intense pain. I consulted a doctor, but without the least satisfaction. After about a year of this suffering, I got my first relief when I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using them for a week I found to my great delight that my hands were beginning to feel much better, the deep cracks began to heal up and stop running, and in a little while my hands were cured by using only one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. I am very thankful to say that I have had no return of the skin disease since. I shall be glad if you will publish this so that others may know of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I am, Sir, very respectfully, Minnie Drew, 23 Danforth St., Jamaica Plain, Mass., April 20, 1910."

For thirty years Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded speedy relief to tens of thousands of skin-tormented and disfigured sufferers from eczema, rashes, itching, irritations and chafings, from infancy to age, bringing comfort and peace to distracted households when all else failed.

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the civilized world. Foster Drug & Chemical Co., Boston, 221 North St., 32-34 Cuticura Bldg., "How to Cure for and Treat the Skin and Scalp."

Charles Alexander Eastman, one of the most distinguished representatives of his people, the Sioux Indians, was born in Minnesota fifty-two years ago. He was educated at Dartmouth College and then studied medicine. In 1891 he married Elaine Goodale, the poet and author. Besides serving as a physician among the Indians in the Dakotas, he has been practically in charge of the whole Indian field for some years. Several books on nature themes have come from his pen and he has given many lectures on Indian life and history. Dr. Eastman's home is at Amherst, Mass.

There is no trade so large but that the Foster Furniture company can handle it. They recently furnished the new mammoth Anthony hotel at Fort Wayne, at a cost of $60,000. And yet there is no trade so small but what they welcome it.

The secretary of the state board of health of Kentucky has compiled the cost to the people of the state brought about last year by diseases that were preventable. Reports show that there were 128,717 cases of sickness which proper care and regulation would have prevented. Of these cases 12,337 resulted fatally. The secretary estimates that each case cost $34 for the care of the sick and loss of time, and the average value of the life sacrificed to a preventable disease is set at $1,700.—Boston Transcript.

RHEUMATISM
PURIFYING THE BLOOD
THE ONLY PERMANENT CURE
No case of Rheumatism was ever cured except by a thorough purification of the blood; just as long as the blood remains charged with fermenting uric acid poison, the painful disease will continue. The pains and aches of Rheumatism are simply superficial effects of the impurities in the circulation, and sometimes may be temporarily relieved by the application of plasters, liniments, hot cloths, etc. But the person who trifles with this dangerous disease by depending on local treatment alone, is certain to pay for the mistake with constant suffering later on. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism in the only way it is possible to cure the disease. It goes down into the blood, and removes the uric acid from the circulation, so that the nerves, bones, muscles and joints are lubricated and fed with nourishing elements instead of being continually irritated and inflamed with the sharp, uratic impurity. When S. S. S. has cleansed and purified the blood, the pains and aches cease, all inflammation disappears, stiffened muscles are made pliant, and every troublesome symptom of Rheumatism is permanently corrected. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free to all who write.

APPENDIX AS A PELLAGRA CURE

South Carolina Physician
Employs an Irrigation
Process in It.

THREE PATIENTS WELL

Spartanburg, S. C., Nov. 28.—In a paper read before the Fourth District Medical association at Greenville, and again read here at a meeting of the County Medical association, Dr. A. D. Cudd, director of the Good Samaritan Hospital of this city, told of the successful treatment of pellagra in a manner utterly at variance with the method ordinarily followed.

Working on the theory that the pellagra germ is in the same class as that of tuberculosis, and that the colon, or lower part of the large intestine, is its most frequent habitat, he removed the lower end of the vermiform appendix, thereby making a natural tunnel through the abdominal wall, through which the colon was irrigated with an alkaline antiseptic solution.

In three out of four cases in which Dr. Cudd has adopted this method marked improvement or apparent recovery has resulted. The fourth patient came to the hospital suffering from pellagra in its worst form. Her temperature was 103, the backs of her hands and forearms were denuded and her mouth and throat were almost gangrenous. Appendectomy was performed, but the patient died on the third day after treatment was begun.

Dr. Cudd says: "I believe that irrigation is the best treatment for pellagra known at present, but I do not believe that the irrigation has been therapeutically perfected."

Dr. Cudd's theory that the appendix may be used as a tube through which the intestine may be irrigated with antiseptic solutions is regarded by local physicians as ingenious. If nothing else, Pellagra is usually treated with a form of arsenic. There is no specific for the disease and it is generally fatal.

PREHISTORIC STAMP FOUND.
In Fine State of Preservation, With Particles of Wax Clinging to Face. (Mexican Herald.)

One of the most remarkable archaeological and ethnological discoveries made in Mexico since Prof. William Niven found the famous clay tablets of life and death down in the jungles of Guerrero, has been made amid the buried pile of ruins uncovered by the sand and diggers of Atzacpalco. The find consists of nothing less than an official seal, or stamp, used by some prehistoric emperor or king in affixing his o. k. to papers of state. The discovery was made about eight-cent feet beneath the surface of the old river, or lake bed, which exists near the pretty suburb above named. This stream or pool has long been dead, the waters having been diverted by nature in another direction, so that now it is merely a basin of gravel overlaid with sand.

The artifact, which is about two inches in diameter, and in a perfect state of preservation, is remarkable for the fact that it contains, on the side used for stamping, several concentric circles at the margin, then a ring of hieroglyphics much resembling the characters of the ancient Russian alphabet, and around the center three more concentric rings.

The center itself is a corrugated hole, evidently used for the insertion of a wooden or stone handle. The upper surface of the seal, which is, of course, circular in shape, is rounded, so that the entire object forms almost a perfect hemisphere. On the top are other marks, evidently carved in the seal after the clay had hardened, and possibly intended to represent the signs of the zodiac, as they were known to the primitive astronomers of Mexico.

When found, particles of some black substance, evidently either wax or some ink-like fluid, were still clinging to the face, showing that the seal had not been subjected to very great action by the waters.

PROBLEM ON THE PAVING.

(Richard Harding Davis.)

And sometimes—how very often, only a brief line in the daily paper tells—you will see the young man who sits by himself away from the crowd on a bench and who is trying to work out a problem on the asphalt with the point of a cane.

It is a very old problem, and some one once crystallized it by asking in a book if life is worth the living. The young man never read the book, but he is trying to answer the question by and for himself, and he has stepped from the street and has come out here into the square to think it over for the hundredth time.

He has placed a great many ambitions against very few accomplished facts, and nothing matters, nothing is of any consequence, not even success, and what is still worse, not even failure.

And the girl in the case is honestly not worth all his bother—if he could only get to see it; but he cannot see it and starts restlessly and rubs out the markings on the asphalt with the sole of his shoe. He is terribly in earnest, is this young man, and he will not pause when he has decided, and the time has come to act; he will read over the letters in his pocket for the last time very steadily, the letters from home and the letters from her, and tear them up in small pieces and throw them away with the cards that bear his name, with every other scrap of paper that comes to hand.

He carries so little after all, who he was. When it gets darker and the electric lights throw long, black shadows on the empty sidewalks, and the old gentlemen get up stiffly and hobble away to bed, and leave only the lovers on the benches, the young man will bite a hole in his handkerchief where his name was written in by one of the people at home, and will step back into the shadow of the tree behind the bench and answer the problem in the negative. And the selfish lovers on the bench a hundred yards away will jump to their feet when they hear the report, startled and frightened, but still holding each other's hands.

AGED 30 AND HAS
HAD HALF DOZEN

Mrs. White, Washington, is Full of Experience and Trouble.

MAY SEEK A SEVENTH

Washington, Nov. 28.—"I am going to do my wife duty by 'Bill' White and secure his release from the workhouse. If, after he gets out, he don't treat me with more consideration, I am going to leave him and eventually secure a divorce, and try and find a soul mate, which I have thus far failed to do, notwithstanding that my present marriage is my sixth."

This unique statement was made by Mrs. White, who says she is related to a former president of the United States, when asked how she was endeavoring to secure the release of her husband, William G. White, proprietor of a Turkish bath, who was recently sentenced to the workhouse for six months for beating his wife.

From recent developments it appears as though White may have to serve his term, and in addition face other charges on his release.

Last week Assistant District Attorney Ralph Given was asked by a New York woman to issue a warrant for the arrest of White on the charge of bigamy, saying she was married to White twenty years ago and is the mother of his eight children. Mr. Given informed her he was powerless to act, inasmuch as the marriage ceremony to the present Mrs. White was performed in Baltimore. The woman who claims to be wife No. 1 threatens to visit Baltimore and lay the matter before the district attorney there, and in the meantime wife No. 2 is doing her utmost to secure White's release from the workhouse.

Mrs. White, said to be No. 2, in continuing her story, said: "I certainly drew a half dozen lemons in the matrimonial orchard. No, I will correct myself. Out of the six husbands I have had there were two good ones, but they both died. The rest were a queer mixture. Here is how it happened:

When I was fourteen years of age at my home in Charlton, W. Va., I married Dr. George Summers, who was more than twice my age, being thirty-two. He was a model husband, but he died in about a year. He left me with a little baby, who lived until it was six months old. One year later I married Albert Van Buron, but he was a poor proposition, so I divorced him after two years. My next venture was with John Kennedy, but John died after six months, and I was on the market again.

"I then took a liking to a young fellow named Harvey Elswick, and after a year's courtship married him. I was then twenty-one years of age. We were getting along nicely when Harvey shot a saloonkeeper and was sent to the penitentiary for three and a half years. I personally petitioned the governor of West Virginia to pardon him, which he did, but Harvey proved ungrateful, and after a while I was forced to secure legal separation. Then I met and married Howard Dunn in one day, but found out that he was cut on parole from Sing Sing prison. I got a divorce quickly.

"About a year later I met 'Bill' White, who, by the way, is my second cousin, and we married in Baltimore. 'Bill' is a good fellow except when he is drinking, and then he is a demon. If he will let liquor alone I will have nothing to fear, but if he ever starts drinking again and starts any of his foolishness, I am going to lose him like the others, and I don't know of any law which prevents one marrying the seventh time.

"And, just think of it, I am not thirty years old! I am surely in receipt of a variety in the way of husbands, and can deliver a good lecture to prospective brides. Still, I don't want to be understood as being opposed to matrimony. I think it is a grand proposition, provided there is a meeting of the minds, and I am going to keep on trying until I find the right one, and then I know I will be happy.

"Try, try, try again," is my motto. In the meantime White is in the workhouse, but receives almost daily visits from his cousin-wife, whose cheering words assure him that in a few days more he will be liberated.

Many school children suffer from constipation, which is often the cause of seeming stupidity at lessons. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are an ideal medicine to give a child, for they are mild and gentle in their effect, and will cure even chronic constipation. Sold by all dealers.

One of the Great Trials of Unskilled American Working Girls Is Lack of Opportunity.

(See Alastair Clark and Edith Wyatt, in December McClure's.)

Discouragement at the lack of opportunity to advance was expressed to the National Consumers' league by almost all the narrators of their histories who were engaged in unskilled factory work. Among them, Emily Clement, an American girl, was one of the first workers who gave the league an account of her experience in New York.

Emily was tending an envelope machine, at a wage of $6 a week. She was about twenty years old, and before her employment at the envelope machine she had worked, at the age of fourteen, for a year in a carpet mill; then for two years in a tobacco factory, and then for two years had kept house for a sister and an aunt living in an east side tenement.

She still lived with them, sharing a room with her sister, and paying $3 a week for her lodging, with board, and part of her washing. She did the rest of her washing, and made some of her sister's clothes and all of her own. This skill had enabled her to have for $6.20, the cost of the material, the pretty spring suit she wore—a coat, skirt and jumper, of cloth much too thin to protect her from the chill of the weather, but stylishly cut and becoming.

In idle times she had done a little sewing for friends, for her income had been quite inadequate. During the twenty-two weeks she had been in the factory she had had full work for eleven and one-half weeks, at $6; half-time work for eight and one-half weeks, at $3, and two weeks of slack work, in each of which she earned only $1.50.

She had no money at all to spend for recreation, and in her hopelessness of the future and her natural thirst for pleasure, she sometimes accepted it from chance men acquaintances met on the street.

Another unskilled worker of twenty Sarina Dashkileff, intended to escape from her monotonous work and low wage by educating herself in a private evening school.

For this she contrived to save $4 a month out of her income of $4 a week. Sarina packed powder in a drug factory from 8 to 6 o'clock, with three-quarters of an hour for lunch. She was a beautiful and brilliant girl, who used to come to work in the winter dressed in her summer coat, with a little woolen underjacket to protect her from the cold, and a plain, cheap felt hat, much mocked at by the American girls. Sarina scorned the mental scope of these girls; scorned to spend for dress money with which she could learn to read "Othello" and "King Lear" in the original; and scorned to spend in glazing the lunch hour, in which she might read in Yiddish newspapers the latest tidings of the struggle in Russia.

In the drug factory, and in her east side hall bedroom, she lived in a world of her own—a splendid, generous world of the English tragedies she studied at night school, and of the thrilling hopes and disappointments of the Russian revolution.

She had been in New York a year. In this time she had worked in an artificial flower factory, earning from $2 to $2.25 a week; then as a cutter in a box factory, where she had $3 a week at first, and then $5, for ten hours' work a day. She left this place because the employer was very lax about payment, and sometimes cheated her out of small amounts. She then tried finishing men's coats; but working from 7:30 to 12 and from 1 to 6 o'clock daily brought her only $3 a week and severe exhaustion.

From her present wage of $4 she spent sixty cents a week for car fare and $4.25 a month for her share of a tenement hall bedroom. Although she did not live with them, her mother and father were in New York and she had her dinners with them free of cost. Her luncheon cost her from seven to ten cents a day, and her breakfast consisted of one and one-half cents' worth of rolls.

All that made Sarina Dashkileff's starved and drudging days endurable for her was her clear determination to escape from them by educating herself. Her fate might be expressed in Whitman's words: "Henceforth I ask not good fortune; I myself am good fortune."

Whatever her circumstances, few persons in the world could ever be in a position to pity her.

factory worker, an Austrian girl of nineteen, was also trying to escape from her present position by educating herself at night school, but was drained by cruel homesickness.

Marta had spent all her youth, since her childhood at home—four years in New York—in factory work, without the slightest prospect of advancement. Her work was of the least skilled kind—cutting off the ends of threads from men's suspenders, and folding and placing them in boxes. She earned at first $3 a week, and had been advanced to $5 by a fifty-cent rise at every one of the last four Christmases since she had left her mother and father. But she knew she would not be advanced beyond this last price, and feared to undertake heavier work, as, though she had kept her health, she was not at all strong.

She worked from 8 to 6, with half an hour at noon. On Saturdays the factory closed at 5 in winter and at 1 in summer. Her income for the year had been $257.50. She had spent $28.50 for carfare, $13 for a suit, $2 for a hat and $2 for a pair of shoes she had worn for ten months. Her board and lodging with a married sister had cost her $2.50 a week, less in one way than in another. But she slept with part of her sister's family, did her own washing and her sister's, scrubbed the floor, and rose every day at 6:30 to help with the work and prepare her luncheon before starting for the factory at 7.

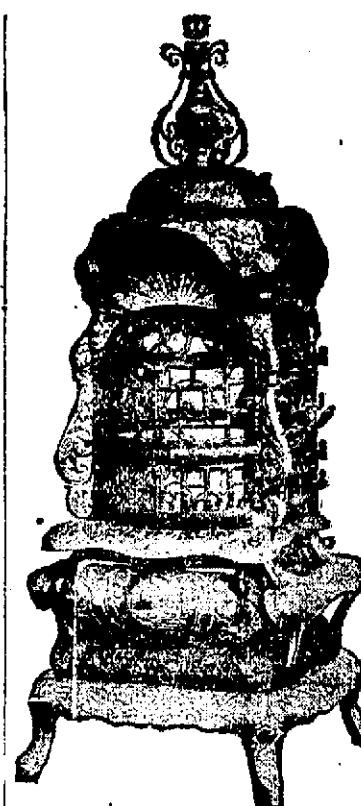

Marta could earn so little that she had never been able to save enough to make her deeply desired journey back to Austria to see her mother and father. Although both their children were in the new country, her mother and father would not be admitted under the immigration law, because her father was blind.

MANY OF THIS LOCALITY CONTINUE TO PRAISE IT.

About every three months the Root Juice Medicine Company, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has to double its capacity in the manufacture of the wonderful Root Juice that has made so many remarkable cures throughout the country. We are told that the company is deluged with letters from the afflicted of every part of the United States. Hundreds and hundreds of people write to the company for information, and many of them send money through the mail, as there is no agency in their locality. Since Bradley Bros. got the agency at this point hundreds of people have bought the remedy, and as the Root Juice business here, it not above the average, the inventor of the remedy is certainly being rewarded.

But such should be the case, as the medicine gives wonderful satisfaction and seems to permanently cure some of the most stubborn stomach, liver and kidney troubles, rheumatism and nervous weakness. Many people living at this point and vicinity, whom we know, have called at the drug store to express their thanks for the great good Root Juice has done for them. Among the many whom Root Juice has cured was Joseph Simpson. He said: "I had a complication of stomach, liver and kidney troubles, of long standing. I suffered very much and used many different medicines, without being benefited, but, I tell you, I struck the right bottle when I got Root Juice, as three bottles of the great medicine has entirely cured me." Hardly a day passes without someone calling at the drug store to praise the medicine.

AND ICE TONGS.CAPTAIN ANDERSON AND SIXTY-FIVE POUND GOOSE FISH
HE CAUGHT WITH ICE TONGS IN THE HUDSON

New York, Nov. 23.—Captain Andrew Anderson, skipper of dock scow No. 6, of the Moran Towing company, captured a "goose" fish the other day, weighing sixty-five pounds and four feet in length, with no other implements than a boat hook and a pair of ice tongs. The strange looking creature showed strength in proportion to its size, and made such a struggle that it nearly carried its captor overboard.

RUSSIANS HAVE SMALL HOLDINGS

Peasants in Domain of the Little Father Are Becoming Slowly Independent.

(London Times.)

A new physical feature is finding its place on the face of Russia, and with it there is coming a perceptible change in the agricultural landscape. Even the casual railway traveler notices here and there between his train and the far horizon a habitation—neither the grange of an estate owner nor the weather-stained cluster of wooden crofts that is the seat of the commune—around which the signs of life are fresh. It is the hut, the farmhouse of the peasant who has availed himself of M. Stolypin's land act, and is seeking to establish himself, supported by state funds and the tutelage of state agronomists, as a yeoman freeholder. If the traveler pauses long enough in his journey to get in touch with the talk of the countryside, he will find that the advent of the new farmer is the absorbing topic of market days. From six weeks of visiting in the governments of Pskoff and Vitebsk, preceded by some study of the land act, the present writer has received certain impressions, of which the foremost is the vitality and strong growth of the new scheme.

Nowhere was there to be found a farmer who regretted that he had left the commune. After four years of operation—the establishment of the system of individual small holdings was ordained by ukase at the end of 1906, although it only became a law nearly this year—there have been less than 3 per cent. of protests from the new farmers against the situation they find themselves in, and these have been addressed to the local land reorganization commission, complaining that their holdings have been a worse bargain than some of their neighbors have secured. So varied are the local conditions in the vast territory placed under the act that great latitude has been given the local land commissions in drafting tenancies to the new farmers. The credits furnished from the imperial treasury through the Peasants' Land bank, which is the go-between in the relations of the new farmers to the estate owners, who are selling under the act, and to the commune authorities, where the common land is being passed over to the individual ownership, have had to be based on certain speculative factors. The first repayments are not due until ten years after entering on tenancy; it will be about eight years from now before the treasury can begin to measure its bad debts. The sponsors of the scheme are well aware of their risk, and the measures they are taking to secure themselves from a most instructive factor in the present land campaign.

Many Want Small Holdings.

In each of the administrative districts where the act is in operation—and everywhere there is an unceasing stream of applicants for small holdings—the president of the local commission has to make periodic inspections to see whether the men who have been given credits are making good husbandmen. At these meetings one sees a state of things quite new in the mutual attitude of the working population and the emissaries of the government. There is, of course, not much exchange of compliments. The settlers have grievances; they have all the farmer's traditional aptitude for complaining about everything, beginning with the weather. But whether it be the overplus of last year's abundant harvest or the crops gathered this season, which even the bad rains of August have left well above the average, or the psychological buoyancy of working in new surroundings for one's own hand and hearth, there is the spectacle of actual good will between elements that used to stand in the relation of beasts of burden to beasts of prey. M. Stolypin's lieutenants have had the practical sense to staff their local commissions primarily with intelligent agriculturalists. Their task combines land surveying, conveyancing and financial administration as its ostensible burden; but the chief actual business of the head of the commission is to help in training a population of good farmers.

In Southern Pskoff the staple crops raised on the peasants' commune lands are rye, potatoes and flax. These three rotate in unbroken alternation on the narrow strips of soil to which the subdivisions and reorganizations had reduced the common land before the individual holdings act was applied. Conditions in the communes which still adhere to the old system indeed are an unanswerable argument on the side of M. Stolypin. The absence of currency, or other medium of exchange had so completely deprived the commune system of driving power that the periodic reallocations among the families have been conducted for years past as a village handicap directed toward giving every man an equal chance and the land no chance at all. The result usually aimed at was that no family should reach a better position than its most unlucky or thriftest neighbor. The commune system still enforces the three-crop rotation, and no more. The agents of the land commission, however, go among the new farmers and explain, for instance, the superior advantages of clover over potatoes, the higher profits in milk from the clover field as compared with the same outlay on potatoes. Most of these agents are avowedly campaigning against the commune, and the government knows it. They are helping the new men with a prompt, gratuitous supply of current price lists of the Russian produce markets to enable them to make better bargains with the traveling buyers, who have hitherto, especially after a good harvest, had altogether the better of the grower. The incoming tenants frequently have implements and stock advanced to them, and always such assistance as advice regarding the best way to drain land is given along with the contract for a holding. In no case is more than 10 per cent. of the purchase money asked on entering occupation, and an applicant may come in on less than 5 per cent., or on nothing at all, if the local land reorganization commission regards him as a good investment. Foley's Honey and Tar is a great medicine for coughs, colds and all affections of the throat, chest and lungs. It has never received one line of unfavorable comment or condemnation and has an immense and ever increasing sale. It is the best cough medicine for children, as it contains no opiates and no harmful or habit-forming drugs. It is a sure help for croup, and relieves at once the hoarse metallic cough, and removes the false membrane that causes the trouble. It is a safe and sure family medicine, and cures quickly laryngitis, coughs, whooping cough, bronchial coughs, and the chronic coughs of elderly people. Mrs. F. Marti, St. Joe, Mich., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar saved the life of our baby boy. He contracted a severe bronchial trouble and would cough violently and get spells of choking and gagging and turn black in the face. The doctor's medicine did not cure him but I always had great faith in Foley's Honey and Tar and started giving it to the child. In a short time he got relief, and finally the cough was entirely stopped, and the choking and gagging spells ceased, and he got well in just a short time, gaining in weight and getting robust. Foley's Honey and Tar has many times saved us much trouble, and we always keep it in the house and recommend it on every occasion." For sale by Dr. J. E. Bros.

this wholesale creation of small holdings is that the interest of the apportioning agents of the state and of the new occupiers are in accord.

Zeal Offset By Hostility.

The amount of systematic zeal that one sees applied to extending individual ownership wherever possible among the peasantry seems to be evoked in some degree by the passive hostility to the scheme displayed in circles on whose support the government usually relies. Many of the clergy are opposed to it on the ground that the migration of families into isolated farmhouses and away from the village, by taking the peasants further from the church door, will be detrimental to the revenues and teachings of the church. It is estimated that most of the squires are antagonistic to the act in its present phase. The peasants who have left the communes give all their spare time to installing themselves on their new holdings, and hired labor becomes more scarce. Those owners of moderate sized estates concede one merit in the scheme; it may give the peasant class a respect for property as such which was very far to seek during the last politico-agrarian troubles. The great territorial magnates are presumably not hostile, otherwise the project would not have become law. It is resented by the produce dealers and credit traders because the government agents are helping the peasant farmer protect his gains by the old days. Then there is the tion founded, no doubt, on general distastefulness of any and every act of the existing administration. There is the party disadvantage that the new farming population, being removed from contact with the unwelcome functionalities of the departments of the interior and of justice and their police methods, is forgetting some of its dislike for everything emanating from the executive in the present friendly relations with the army of experts now applying the land law.

PICKING COTTON BY MACHINE.

(The World's Work.)

The machine itself is about as inspiring a sight as the gin was in Whitney's day. It is a small, gasoline, traction engine, with two-picking attachments swung under it, and a pair of canvas bags hung out behind. It travels through the field about as fast as a man walks, taking the cotton plant between the wheels, where it is picked over by almost countless, revolving steel fingers which catch the lint, but leave the plant uninjured, so that the inter holls may mature. To leave the unripe holls has been the great difficulty in making a mechanical cotton-picker. Cotton cannot be gathered all at once like wheat.

Cotton bolls on the same plant mature and open progressively, making the problem of mechanically picking cotton extremely difficult. A cotton picking machine to be commercially successful must be able to pick the open bolls without injury to the unopened bolls and blooms, or to the foliage of the plant itself.

The picking machinery is on two drums which hang from the frame of the tractor, one on each side of the cotton plant as the machine straddles the row. An endless chain of upright cylinders of small diameter follow each other around the drum. From these cylinders the needles which do the picking project horizontally into the plant. When the machine starts, everything moves with a motion of its own. The drum carries the cylinders around; the cylinders poke the needles into the plant at the proper angle, and the fingers turn and catch the cotton. Every motion is delicately adjusted.

The fingers move fast enough to catch the fibre, but not fast enough to throw it off. The cylinders bring each finger into place at the proper time, so that there is never a space large enough for an open boll to pass through without touching a finger. The drum is moving backward at the same rate that the whole machine moves forward, so that the picking needles do not move horizontally through the plant, but merely turn in it.

The Fastest Growing Magazine in America

HAMPTON'S Unparalleled Success

The December edition of HAMPTON'S MAGAZINE is 450,000 copies. The growth of HAMPTON'S in the two years of its existence is unparalleled in the history of periodical publishing. Millions of intelligent men and women declare HAMPTON'S is the "Best Magazine in America." Why is this so? It is because HAMPTON'S has a personality which expresses itself every month in special articles of immense importance. It is because of the one big rule in HAMPTON'S editorial office—LOOK AROUND FOR THE BIG IMPORTANT THING AND GO AFTER IT. The men who do the biggest things tell their own stories of their achievements, in HAMPTON'S. HAMPTON'S personality is shown in the magazine's constant and vigorous portrayal of the people's rights. HAMPTON'S has taken the leadership for clearness, forcefulness, intelligibility and readableness. HAMPTON'S pleases its readers by giving them a simplicity of words plus a simplicity of facts—and the facts are always those that the people need to know in order to protect themselves. And HAMPTON'S fiction is equally "different" from that of other magazines. Quantity will not satisfy the people who read HAMPTON'S every month. They demand the highest quality obtainable. They demand fiction with vitality. HAMPTON'S will never print a vapid, lifeless story. It has no room for the product of a human fiction factory.

SHE DOCTORS SICK CITIES.

Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane Has Ministered to Many Municipalities.

(London Post.)
Doctor to sick municipalities is the name given to Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane, the first municipal expert of her kind. It is an unusual, an amazing title for a woman.

When you add to this, modern, efficient minister, model housekeeper, wife of a contented husband, you have a combination of virtues hard to beat in one woman. But Mrs. Crane has all these virtues.
Mrs. Crane's home town is Kalamazoo, Mich.
Mrs. Crane, minister to municipalities, began her career in Kalamazoo as a Unitarian preacher. First she built up the Sunday school to hitherto undreamed of proportions and prosperity. Then she married one of the leading physicians of the state. Then, having gotten her church work running smoothly, she scrutinized the town in its general aspect and found that it needed cleaning up. Beginning with the back yards, whose unkempt condition she exposed in a public lecture illustrated with lantern slides made from her graphically taken photographs, she proceeded to make the citizens of Kalamazoo so thoroughly ashamed of all their municipal deficiencies and blemishes that within a very short time the town was a model. Soon neighboring towns began to hear of her achievement, saying: "Come over and help us." Somewhat reluctantly Mrs. Crane went. As a result Saginaw brushed its municipal back hair and smoothed out its civic garments. Then other cities, great and small, repeated the Macdonaldian cry, "Come over and help us." A whole host of towns of the size of Kalamazoo asked for her inspection.

Then Scranton, the big Pennsylvania coal city, invited her to come and tell it what was wrong. She made valuable suggestions to them all. Then the entire state of Kentucky called for her, and she went and advised with the state board of health and the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Last month she assisted at the general civic housecleaning of the state of Minnesota. When Mrs. Crane inspects a city or a state, no detail escapes her eye. Streets, smoke, back yards, tenements, water supply, ash and garbage removal, drainage, dairies, markets, slaughter houses, parks, playgrounds, jails, schools, asylums, hospitals—all these and many more she looks over and criticises. If her criticism is adverse, she prescribes the medicine.

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 28.—In view of world shipments, 40,000,000 bushels larger this season than last and $3,000,000 bushels in excess of two years ago, wheat today showed weakness even though last week's total proved less than had been looked for. Promises of increased acreage throughout India, were also in favor of the bears. Advices from Argentina, however, continued conflicting. The opening here was 1/2¢ lower to 1/4¢ higher. May started at 95 1/2¢ to 95 3/4¢ down to a shade up at 95 1/2¢ to 95 3/4¢ and fell back to 45 1/2¢.

Oats were slow with local traders selling. May started unchanged to a shade up at 35 1/2¢ to 35 3/4¢ and dropped to 35 1/2¢.

Fair buying gave a firm tone to provisions. First sales were at 2 1/2¢ to 2 3/4¢ advance with January 1 1/2¢ to 1 3/4¢ for pork, $9.67 1/2 for lard and $8.74 1/2 for ribs.
